GOVERNOR HAPPY AS HE ENDS PEOPLE'S FIGHT FOR RAILWAY

Governor Foss signed the Grand Trunk bill at 1:05 o'clock this afternoon.

Governor Foss, after signing the act which makes it possible for the Grand Trunk to build across Massachusetts into Boston, gave out a typewritten statement telling of the pleasure he took in signing the Grand Trunk bill:

Foss' Pleasure at Signing.

The entrance of the Grand Trunk Railroad into Boston is necessary for the future development of the port, and desirable as a means of controlling, through competition, the dominant railroad interests in this State. I, therefore, take pleasure in signing the bill.

The people of Boston and of the entire Commonwealth are to be congratulated that the Legislature has granted the petition of this important Canadian railroad. With the enactment of this measure, one of the principal obstacles to Boston's development as a metropolis and a great seaport is removed. In my judgment, Boston will respond immediately by an increased development, industrially and in wealth and population.

However, I wish to point out to the people of Massachusetts that the enactment of the measure does not of itself solve all the transportation problems confronting the State. It does not provide for a proper physical connection between the North and South Stations in Boston, by which alone the present inconvenient break in transportation facilities at an important point can be remedied. And it does not provide for elec trification within the Metropolitan District which is indispensably necessary for the health and comfort of one and a half million people. It does not provide that efficient control over rates and service which a strong transportation commission, such as I am advocating, can alone supply.

In fact, the entrance of the Grand Trunk puts greater emphasis upon the necessity of such control. Adding to the number of transportation companies increases the duty of the State to control and regulate all transportation within the borders of the Commonwealth.

Notable People's Victory.

An efficient public regulation of transportation and all other public services can be secured at the present session of the Legislature if the people will make their wishes sufficiently known to their Senators and Representatives.

I cannot believe that the Legislature will continue to refuse what the public so strongly desires. Only some of the corporations which are to be regulated oppose this much-needed legislation.

The many expressions of public sentiment which have come to my office from all parts of the State leave no room for doubt as to what the people think.

WHAT BOTH SIDES SAY.

THE STRIKE COMMITTEE SAYS:

"We should not be held accountable for the alleged lawless acts of irresponsible persons, even though the acts complained of may have been committed by men who sympathize with us in our struggle for higher wages.

"Our organization is opposed to all forms of intimidation, whether it be the intimidation of Elevated officials in trying to deprive men of the right to organize or the intimidation of strikers by others in or outside of the ranks of organized labor.

"At every meeting held by our union we have urged that no violence be used, and we are confident that the alleged attacks of those working against the present strike were not committed by union men. We stand for peace, industrial and civil, as proven by our offer of arbitration made to the Elevated company before the strike started."

DEPUTY SUPERINTENDENT OF POLICE WARREN SAYS:

"The police are today taking extra care to keep the streets and corners clear of all hoodlums who have been making the disturbances in this strike. The rowdies will be kept moving by the police all over the city. If the men object, they will be locked up. Arrests are left to the discretion of the policemen. The police intend to see to it that there is no more violence, and for that reason we are taking every precaution to insure quiet and safety for the public."

SOME DISTURBANCES IN HEART OF BUSINESS SECTION—GOMPERS EXPECTED HERE.

The noise of an exploding fuse and the shouts from a crowd brought 3,000 people around a trolley car on Washington street, between Beach and Essex, shortly after noon. Before the excitement had quieted down a detail of police reserves was rushed from the Lagrange street station.

The demonstration was the most serious with which the police have had to deal in the heart of the city.

About the same time a crowd of several hundred surrounded a car at the corner of Winter and Washington streets and jeered at the crew of the car. Workmen on nearby buildings taunted the conductor and motorman. The crowd was scattered by the police. Several arrests were made.

Corner Blocked by Fuse Blow.

Both outbreaks came when thousands were out for lunch. The car in which the fuse blew out was a Broadway Extension-City Point open car. The noise caused a rumor to spread that some one had been shot. Instantly several hundreds were running from all directions and the corner was packed.

The Boston Central Labor Union and the union of stationary engineers informed the general strike committee of the unionized men of the Boston Elevated Company today that a petition to the Legislature was being prepared and would be presented at once asking for a thorough investigation of the street car strike.

Union labor men who brought this news to strike headquarters, No. 724 Washington street, declared that the Legislature would be asked also to investigate the charge that the Boston Elevated Company is violating a State law by not carrying school children at half rates.

The labor men said that the investigation would be asked on the ground that the railroad company had not been giving the public proper service and that thousands of people have been compelled to walk long distances in consequence.

Service Good, Says Company.

The Elevated company reported practically normal service on all their lines today, but the strikers say that the company did not run more than 25 per cent. of its cars.

The strikers asserted that the company started a house to house canvass of all of their former employes today, asking them to return to work. The strikers said that in some cases a cash bonus of $2 a day was offered as long as the strike lasted. An Elevated official made this statement:

"All men hired so far as needed will be given permanent jobs if competent."

Deputy Superintendent Warren at police headquarters today was asked if the policemen who are doing strike duty would be paid extra by the company.

"The police of Boston are not being paid by the company," he said. "They are simply doing their duty in protecting the public. Every man on the force is at work. There have been no demands for extra men made on us."

Much excitement was caused in Washington street near Kneeland today when a car being run by a green motorman crashed into another, smashing glass and frightening

REPORT T. R. WILL LEAD NEW PARTY

CHICAGO, June 10.—Theodore Roosevelt will be nominated for President, if he is not named by the convention called by the present Republican National Committee to assemble in the Coliseum June 18, he will be nominated by another convention. Moreover, he will maintain the convention, whichever one it is, the nominative him, is the regular Republican convention.

A definite program for the Roosevelt movement for the next few days has been mapped out and has become known. It is claimed has not by any means abandoned hope of being named by the regular convention in spite of the "steam roller."

The Roosevelt program, as it has been mapped out and as it is being carried out by the hotel lobbies and the National Committee rooms and in the headquarters of the Roosevelt faction, is very definite. Its first move is a surprise to the Taft men. The Taftites have confidently believed that after the National Committee got through crushing the Roosevelt delegates the task would be ended. The whole fight is to be transferred to the convention itself. Already the first moves in this fight have been undertaken. The Roosevelt scheme, in short, is to grab the committee on credentials.

The members of the national committee have gone ahead with their program on the theory that when the committee made up the temporary roll the trouble would be ended. Roosevelt leaders believe that

Girl Canoeist's Body Found Secret Romance Is Bared

MISS HELEN CONNOLLY, DROWNED IN CHARLES.

Victim of Double Canoe Fatality Had Been Courted Secretly by Newcomb.

The body of the twenty-year-old girl drowned yesterday in the Charles River at Dedham, which lay in the police station all night, was today identified as that of Helen Connolly, of No. 14½ Circuit street, Roxbury.

The girl was drowned when the canoe in which she and Chester B. Newcomb, of No. 2-A Wellington street, Boston, had gone boating, was overturned. He was also lost.

The identification was made by the girl's aunt, Mrs. Thomas W. Casserly, with whom she lived. She read in the papers of the finding of the body. Newcomb had called at the house at noon yesterday to take the girl canoeing, and when Mrs. Casserly saw his name in the paper, she at once notified the police at Dedham and a Roxbury undertaker.

The first clew to the girl's identity was a card in her pocket, bearing the words: "Call Alice, at telephone 1317-R Tremont, North Belmont, No. 21 Yarmouth street, Boston." The police telephoned to "Alice" but were told that she knew no one answering the dead girl's description.

The body of the girl and the young man who was her companion were recovered after their overturned canoe was found by Edward Bell of Boston. The police dragged the river bed and brought up the two bodies. The man was identified by documents in his pockets.

Young Newcomb was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Newcomb. He was born in Roxbury and graduated from the Hugh O'Brien grammar school. He was more than six feet in height and weighed 200 pounds. He was an expert canoeist and swimmer. This fact, coupled with the fact that the water where the accident occurred was only five feet in depth, led the police to believe that the girl must have clutched Newcomb as soon as the canoe overturned, which resulted in the drowning of both.

NEW BEDFORD VESSEL LOST; CREW SAVED

NEW YORK, June 10.—According to a wireless dispatch the schooner Frederick Rossiter of New Bedford was wrecked in latitude 25 degrees 48 minutes north, longitude 74 degrees 5 minutes west. She was loaded with lumber. The crew of seven was rescued by steamer Currito. The schooner is floating, swash and is dangerous to navigation.

DRAG CHARLES FOR AUTOISTS

Police aided by divers today hauled from the bottom of the Charles river the automobile which plunged into the river early today. No trace of the bodies of the four men who were in the machine and may have drowned with it, were found. The river bed was searched by divers, but without avail.

The number of the automobile showed that it was the property of Fred E. Goodwin of Brookline, district superintendent of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company. It was stolen from Mr. Goodwin's home last night.

The case is one of the strangest ever reported to the police, as the mystery of who the four men in the machine were or what became of them is complete.

According to the story told the police by one of the six occupants of the auto, the machine had zigzagged along 250 feet of the new parkway, had broken down two sections of the iron railing and then shot over the embankment into the water. At the point where the auto sank the river is fully twenty feet deep.

The case is the strangest that ever came under the notice of the Metropolitan Park police. The identity of the four missing occupants of the car has puzzled the police for hours. Whose auto it was that took the plunge was another point they are anxious to clear up positively until the diver has completed his work of attaching ropes to the body of the machine, by which it will be drawn to the surface.

Chamberlain had previously been held in Associate Justice Robert Walcott in Cambridge on the charge of manslaughter in running over and killing Peter L. Wormley of Boston with his automobile on Saturday night, March 16.

The police thought that at least four of the young men in the auto may have been carried with it into the river when the machine tore across the curbing, a distance of 250 feet on the new parkway, broke down two sections of iron railing and then shot into the water.

But one of the occupants was found by the police. He gave the name of Gerard Whalen, twenty-three, of No. 3 Crowley street, Roxbury. Whalen said he felt sure the driver of the car, William Sneeley, had escaped. He also told the police he was convinced the other four men had jumped for their lives before the car took the plunge.

MARINES FIGHT CUBAN REBELS

SANTIAGO, Cuba, June 10.—Company A of the United States marines guarding property at the Cuero mines, was attacked by rebels in the darkness early today. More than 100 shots were fired before the negro insurgents were driven off.

There were no casualties. The marines were under command of Captain Manwaring. These were the first shots that have been fired against U. S. marines since marines have been landed for the protection of property. Rebels attacked a plantation at Hatiffio last night, burning several tons of sugar cane. They were attacked by armed volunteers and dispersed. Several volunteers were wounded. Hatiffio, twenty-five miles from this city.

HAVANA, June 10.—The United States battleship Rhode Island and the armored cruiser Washington arrived here at 12:45 o'clock this afternoon from Key West.

As they entered the harbor reports were circulated throughout the city that President Gomez had decided to resign if the American war vessels were not withdrawn from this port immediately.

Great crowds lined the harbor as the ship came to anchor, but there were no cheers. The Cubans watched in silence the manoeuvres of the vessels as they brought the city under range of their guns and dropped anchor. Salutes were exchanged as the war craft entered.

FINED $200 IN AUTO TRAGEDY

Edwin M. Chamberlain, a graduate of Harvard University and a teacher of English in the Rindge Technical School, Cambridge, appeared in the Middlesex County Superior Court today and pleaded guilty to the charge of "going away without stopping after causing an injury to a person," and paid his fine of $200 with two new crisp $100 bills.

Chamberlain was represented in court by Arthur P. Stone, associate justice of the Cambridge District Court, and Attorney Henry H. Winslow. After Chamberlain was called, his attorneys had a conference with Judge McLaughlin at the bench.

NINE PEOPLE ARE FOUND SLAIN IN A HOUSE IN IOWA

DES MOINES, Ia., June 10.—The bodies of nine persons, all of whom had apparently been murdered by having their skulls crushed with an axe or some other heavy instrument, have been found in the home of J. B. Moore, a merchant of Villeca, in Southwestern Iowa, according to a telephone message received from there today.

BIGELOW ASKS FOR COPPER REHEARING

WASHINGTON, June 10.—A. S. Bigelow filed in the Supreme Court today a petition for a rehearing in the Old Dominion Copper Company case, which was decided adversely to Bigelow several weeks ago.

PRESIDENT GOMPERS IS EXPECTED IN BOSTON BY "L" STRIKERS

Arbitration Offered by State Board. New Men Hired by Company.

ing men and women on the car. Immediately after that a fuse blew out of a car at the same place, and people thinking it was a shot gathered until the crowd numbered 500. The police scattered the crowd.

The company announced today that they would give men who have struck until noon today to return, but that under no circumstances would any man be re-employed who had committed acts of disorder either to person or property.

The unionized men have planned for a parade and mass meeting tomorrow to show the public their strength. They will gather on the Common and march to Faneuil Hall, where their meeting will begin at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, is expected in Boston, but just when he will come has not been announced.

More New Men Arrive in Boston.

More men to take the places of the strikers arrived from Boston at 8:45 a. m. Others had been arriving daily from other cities since the strike began. There were sixty-eight in the crowd that reached the South Station today. They had breakfast in the station and were then taken to the Bartlett street barns in Roxbury.

Heavy police details were on duty at each car barn, and patrolmen rode on each car during the early hours. Patrols were distributed throughout the sections where most trouble has previously been experienced, in readiness to check any outbreak.

The union men picketed all car barns, using peaceful arguments in efforts to win new men to their cause.

Arbitration Offer.

The State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration has offered its services, but the Elevated Company has not replied. International President Mahon of the Carmen's Union has said he favored arbitration under certain conditions. President William A. Bancroft, in a statement made public today, stated the company's views on the question of the right of the men to unionize in this language:

It (Boston Elevated Railway Company) does not recognize the necessity of any interference whatever with the loyal, cordial and generous relations which have existed in the past, exist in the present and must exist in the future between its employes and itself.

This is the strikers' view of the situation as voiced today by Organizer Tag.

The company is running today less than 25 per cent. of the normal number of cars.

The strike is practically won.

Old employes deserted the company and joined us because they were compelled to remain quartered with strike-breakers.

Our demonstration tomorrow will show the public the size of our organization. We expect 4,000 men in line.

Statement About Violence.

The general strike committee issued the following statement on strike demonstrations of a violent character today:

We should not be held accountable for the alleged lawless acts of irresponsible persons, even though the acts complained of may have been committed by men who sympathize with us in our struggle for higher wages.

Our organization is opposed to all forms of intimidation, whether it be the intimidation of Elevated officials in trying to deprive men of the right to organize or the intimidation of strikers by others in or outside of the ranks of organized labor.

At every meeting held by our union we have urged that no violence be used, and we are confident that the alleged attacks of those working against the present strike were not committed by union men. We stand for peace, industrial and civil, as proven by our offer of arbitration made to the Elevated company before the strike started.

Explosions Shatter Windows.

In Allston an explosion last night was so severe that the glass in the car's windows were shattered and several passengers were slightly cut. The car was able to proceed. Other passengers in a panic sprang to the street and refused to again board the cars.

Tuesday a wax was sprinkled on the car tracks in Dorchester avenue and an accident was narrowly averted. An inbound car attempted to stop on the slope, but the wheels with locked brakes slid for a hundred yards before the electric came to a stop. The tracks were sanded and scraped.

Extra trains were run today on the New Haven, Boston & Albany and Boston & Maine lines to accommodate the extra traffic which turned to the roads as a result of the curtailed car service.

The road expects to restore night service tonight.

One of the highest officials of the Elevated said:

We feel much gratified at the service we have rendered, and acknowledge the efficient protection we have had from the police of Boston and of the various suburban districts. We feel quite sure that we shall be able to restore the regular after-midnight service Monday night.

"Tag Day" Is Planned.

The Medford strikers have arranged to have a "Tag Day" on Wednesday for the benefit of the strikers with families. The "tag" consists of a pink card with the number of the local union, 589, on one side, and on the other, "Loyalty to Strikers."

The strikers claim to have 125 members in their local and that 200 of the 375 men of the Salem street barns are out on strike. The Board of Health interfered with the sleeping accommodation of the men at the Salem street barns. The men had been using the cushions of the cars for beds. This was stopped and cots were provided.

The Elevated undertook the experiment of operating certain surface car lines up to midnight last night, instead of discontinuing between 7 and 8 p. m. as on the two previous evenings.

On several routes it was possible to maintain a service without serious interference, but in Dorchester, after one or two trial trips, the service was suspended.

No attempt had been made to take a car out of the Fields Corner barn after 7 p. m. Orders were issued to house all cars of the division excepting those on the Geneva avenue line between Fields Corner and Dudley street.

Superintendent Williams believed that if enough policemen were provided he could keep cars moving, and he promised to try it. The first car started out with a double crew and with four policemen on board.

Crowds Surround Car.

The streets near the car barn were packed by fully 2,000 people. As the car run out jeers and yells saluted the carmen and their protectors.

When it turned the corner off Dorchester avenue stones were hurled and one crashed into the car and struck a woman passenger in the head.

Policemen jumped from the car and scattered the crowds while the injured woman was taken into the car barn. The car then proceeded along Geneva avenue, but few people cared to ride.

When the car reached the corner of Howdoin street it was met by an automobile filled with patrolman. The motor car preceded the electric to the Dudley Street station of the Elevated. A few passengers were taken on board and the car made the return trip to Fields Corner under police escort.

One or two other cars that followed the initial one were sent over the line and quickly housed again.

Dorchester, Roxbury and South Boston were the districts where the service had most trouble. In Dorchester the crowds prevented the company from making any pretense of furnishing transportation, and in Roxbury and South Boston no endeavor was made to continue more than one line of cars in service in each territory.

The tracks on every street in Roxbury leading to the Dudley Street Elevated station were idle except Warren street. The police were concentrated on Warren street and cars were run between Grove Hall and Dudley streets until late without interference.

One Line in South Boston.

South Boston people had to be content with accommodations furnished by an occasional car between City Point and Franklin street via Broadway Extension and Washington street.

Other South Boston lines were discontinued. Cars were threatened by young men and boys, and several conductors were assaulted.

There was a disturbance at the corner of Fourth and M streets, when several young men attempted to interfere with the conductor. Benjamin R. Finberg, twenty-four, and Joseph Goldstein, twenty-one, both of No. 7 Christopher street, Dorchester, were accused of participating in the affray. Finberg was arrested for disturbing the peace, and Goldstein, for alleged assault on the conductor, Harry Brown.

Shortly afterward, as a result of a demonstration against a car conductor at the corner of Broadway and P street, James O'Toole, nineteen, of No. 9 Vernon place, Roxbury, was arrested.

No Trouble in Brookline.

All of the Brookline and Brighton lines have been comparatively free from molestation and were operated without any fear of attack. However, the passengers on a Commonwealth avenue car bound for Lake street, were thrown into a panic by the explosion of a heavy charge under the wheels. Some person had placed a cartridge on the rail.

The car was crowded and the shivered glass fell upon the heads of the frightened passengers.

The motorman stopped the car instantly and an examination showed the damage confined to the small plates of glass in the sides of the roof. The wheels did not leave the rails and no passenger was injured.

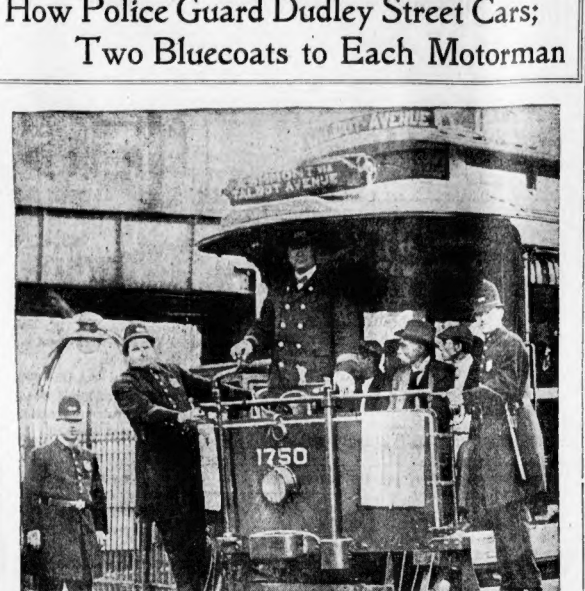
The police held the excitable spirits in Charlestown in check during the daylight hours, when surface cars were in operation through the district. There was an incipient outbreak on a Boston-bound car which was carrying a crowd that had attended a baseball game in the Navy Yard between the nine of the Des Moines and the Bluejackets' Athletic Association.

The service through Charlestown was discontinued, but cars were operated to and from the Sullivan square terminal on the Malden and Everett, the Winter Hill-Medford, the Highland avenue and the Clarendon Hill lines.

All the cars had a clear right of way, but were protected by the police of the adjoining cities. In Somerville and Medford policemen rode on every car, and a number of cars run was consequently limited.

Policemen were passengers on every car of all divisions operated during the evening. Nearly 200 patrolmen were on this duty.

How Police Guard Dudley Street Cars; Two Bluecoats to Each Motorman



This photograph was taken near Dudley street. It is of an outbound car, and is typical of the situation at Boston's largest street car terminal.

STRIKE SITUATION AS THE ELEVATED SEES IT.

During the day we operated nearly the full service from early morning until dark.

On Sunday night we operated on full schedule our rapid transit system, including the Elevated from Sullivan square to Forest Hills; Atlantic avenue; Washington Street Tunnel; East Boston Tunnel; Tremont Street Subway, and the Cambridge Subway; and also ran twenty-one lines connecting therewith, furnishing service to substantially all parts of our entire system.

AS PRESIDENT MAHON SEES IT.

Since Saturday morning over 300 men, on whose sleeves were stripes showing five to thirty years' service with the company, have been enrolled as members.

The company has enough men in its barns to run every car on the system, if it chose, but the officials think that by putting the traveling public to a great amount of inconvenience it will take sympathy away from the strikers.

STRIKERS GIVE OUT FIGURES OF WAGES IN OTHER LARGE CITIES

The striking union men of the Elevated Railroad today gave out this statement:

The Boston Elevated Company is making the claim that their employes have no complaint in regard to wages, asserting they are paying as high a rate to motormen and conductors as is paid in other cities.

This we contradict and stand prepared to prove that the following rates are correct:

In Boston motormen and conductors start at 22 cents an hour and by increases of fractional parts of a cent are increased each year until after fifteen years' service they receive 26¼ cents an hour, with the exception of the elevated men, who get 23½ cents.

Compare this with the following cities:

In Cleveland, first year, men receive 27 cents; second year, 30 cents.

In Pittsburg, where the matter of wages is under settlement, the men have offered to settle with wages the first year 25 cents an hour and 30 cents on and after fifth year.

In Chicago, on surface, wages are 23 cents first six months 25 cents second six months, 35 cents fifth year and after, with 32 cents an hour for the elevated men on and after fifth year.

In Detroit, wages 25 cents an hour first six months, 28 cents next year and 30 cents after that.

In Oakland, Cal., wages 30 cents first year, one cent an hour increase each year next ten years, and 40 cents an hour after that. On Key route, similar to Boston Elevated, 42 cents an hour after ten years.

In Salt Lake City, 22½ cents an hour first year, 30 cents second, and afterward.

In Worcester, wages 28¾ after five years.

In Holyoke, company offered to settle wage scale now being discussed, with payment of 28 cents an hour on and after five years.

We have a list of seventy-five other cities and systems where the income of the companies is not so large as that of the Boston Elevated Company and in all of which the wages are higher after five years' service than they are in Boston after sixteen years' service.

MRS. LARZ ANDERSON REPLIES

Wife of Ambassador Says Story Regarding Poor Girls Is Absurd.

PARIS, June 10.—Mrs. Larz Anderson of Boston, wife of the American Minister to Belgium, who was referred to at the time of her marriage as the "$17,000,000 bride," today denied with great emphasis the story printed by the Paris Midi, that she planned to take poor girls, give them two weeks of luxury and then thrust them back into their surroundings of poverty.

The newspaper complains that this would drive the girls to destruction. The Midi characterizes this as "practicing physiology on the human heart" to give pleasure to the ladies who are feeling bored. In reply to this Mrs. Anderson made this statement:

Mrs. Anderson's Answer:

I often invite the children of the poor districts of Boston to spend a day at my estate, The Weld, at Brookline. The boys and girls play games, are given rides in the pony carts and served with a luncheon, and just before they leave each is presented with a bouquet. I try to be kind to employes, and every Christmas have a tree, mingle with employes and present each with a present.

Since being in Brussels, Mrs. Anderson has formed a club of American girls who are living there, and she thinks that this might have led to the story being circulated.

The article in the paper is as follows:

"There is at this moment in the world a woman with a tendency to commit real crime and because this woman occupies a high social position is no reason why such aberrations should be allowed to pass without protest.

"Massachusetts Castle."

Mrs. Larz Anderson, multi-millionaire American lady and wife of the United States minister to Brussels, has decided to devote her time to practicing psychological experiments on young girls of the poorer class. She chooses a group of twenty little working girls, who are making an honest living and transplants them suddenly to her princely castle in Massachusetts. There for ten days these poor girls are changed by a magic wand into princesses and lead a most luxurious existence. Servants, horses, motor cars, ravishing toilettes and ladies' maids are at their command. Exquisite food is served to them and they enjoy all the delicacies and amusements which an immense fortune can command.

Then, on the tenth day, by the waving of a malicious fairy wand, this phantasmagoria comes to an end. The heroines of this delectable dream awake in their attics, as poor as ever.

Mrs. Larz Anderson tells why this experiment with the life of the rich will raise the ideal of young working girls and stimulate their ambition. We fully believe her, but what is the good of giving them an ambition which is impossible of achievement?

Will Make Them Unhappy.

It will make them wiyers unhappy girls, and they will henceforth have a distaste for their monotonous work and for their humble homes; for to have known lawn linen and silk stockings will have deprived them for all time of their innocent vanity, which prompts the acquisition of a collar of imitation lace or ribbons for 15 cents.

I pity the honest young employes who will marry them; moreover, in all probability they will drift into vice, a splendid result, surely, for Mrs. Anderson. The experiment is very amusing and, doubtless, she will enjoy the emotion of young souls when brought into direct touch with luxury and I don't doubt that the study of their subsequent regrets and cruel deceptions must be strangely fascinating. It remains to be seen if at the very moment when attempts are being made to put a stop to vivisection we are going to allow it to be practiced under a cloak of physiology on the human heart in order to give pleasure to the ladies who are feeling bored.

MAY YOHE MAY BE IN BUFFALO

NEW YORK, June 10.—Close friends of May Yohe in this city have learned that she was in Buffalo, despite the statement of Detective Kilpatrick that she had secured passage on the Minnehaha, which sailed for London on Saturday.

A woman's handbag and a cloak, both rather the worse for wear, were found on a bench in Central Park, near the Mall, by a Miss Gorman of No. 414 West Fifty-eighth street, and turned over to the police. In the bag were several letters, a pawn ticket for a diamond ring, some cards and sixty-two cents.

One letter read:

My Dear Josephine—You know I received a letter from my agent, Mr. Jack Levy, to the effect that it will be impossible for me to get any work until next Winter. You, of course, are aware of my financial condition and how I have struggled for a livelihood since I divorced Mr. Strong.

How I can exist until next Winter, the Lord only knows. I am disgusted. I do not know which way to turn. Take good care of yourself. Always yours, (Signed) MAY A. YOHE.

Josephine Scott is the name of the negro maid May Yohe had at her room at No. 145 West Fifty-third street, from which she disappeared last Thursday, and it was the Scott girl who asked the police to find her mistress. It was said at the house that all of May Yohe's personal belongings are still there.

According to the police of the West Fifty-seventh street station, the negro maid, after looking at the coat found in the park, said it did not belong to her mistress.

INSECT BITE IS FATAL TO WOMAN

LUNENBURG, June 10.—Mrs. Maria Cataldo, aged twenty-five, died at her home here. A physician found that she had been stung on the cheek by an insect. It is not known what kind of an insect bit her. Mrs. Cataldo came here with her husband about four years ago, and was engaged in farming and poultry raising. She is survived by her husband and two brothers.

Hermit Brown of Maine Dead, Aged 87

"Mediator" Long Claimed Power to Converse with God from Cabin in Woods.

BANGOR, Me., June 10.—"Mediator" Brown, the hermit of Boarstone Mountain, who claimed the power to converse with the birds and beasts, and to commune with God, is dead. He died in the Eastern Maine General Hospital here at the age of eighty-seven years, after having lived for half a century in the Maine woods.

His name, "Mediator" Brown, came as a result of his claim to divine inspiration. He made medicine of strange potency from roots and herbs, raising them with crops sufficient to satisfy his needs, upon a little patch of land on the south slope of Boarstone Mountain. Here he had built a log cabin and purchased the surrounding land.

Oil King Makes Remark After New Pastor Tells Story of Old Horse.

NEW YORK, June 10.—A new minister occupied the pulpit in the First Baptist Church at Tarrytown yesterday morning, the regular pastor being away.

He made a plea for supernumerated ministers and told a story about an old horse named Jack which had served its master thirty years, but it was not to make way for new blood. In parting with it the owner said:

"You have been a good old horse, Jack, but now you are a 'has been.'"

After the service John D. Rockefeller remarked that he had a keen sympathy for that horse because of its name and also because he, too, was a "has been."

ROYAL COUPLE DRIVE TO CHURCH IN STORM

LONDON, June 10.—Without a military escort, King George, Queen Mary and Princess Mary drove to St. Paul's Cathedral in a severe storm to attend the hospital Sunday service. For perhaps the first time in their reign, hardly a soul was on the streets to see the King and Queen pass, the drenching rain driving everybody to shelter, but inside the Cathedral there was a brilliant congregation.

FIND CITY PUBLIC BATH HOUSES FREE FROM POLLUTION

Boston will not be obliged, like New York to close its public bathhouses on account of pollution, and they will be opened Saturday, June 15. The water has been examined and found pure.

When the New York health officials ordered the closing of several of the bathhouses on the Hudson and East Rivers because of pollution from sewage, there was some alarm felt in this city, but Chairman Murphy of the bath trustees and Superintendent McGrath say there is no danger whatever from a sanitary viewpoint.

Although there are places along the waterfront where sewage flows into the harbor, the city's twelve floating bathhouses are placed sufficiently distant to keep the water at the houses free from danger, the bath department officials say. They also contend that the ebb and flow of the tide are so great that there is absolutely no danger.

NEWPORT COTTAGERS HAVE GAY SABBATH IN SPITE OF PREACHING

NEWPORT, R. I., June 10.—Ministers may preach against enjoyment of the Sabbath by the rich and poor alike, but members of the cottage settlement in Newport are going to have their pleasures on Sunday, especially the men who are here only for the week ends. Yesterday there were tennis players at the Casino, golfers at the Newport Golf Club, sailing parties, house parties, dinner and luncheon parties given quite numerously. Mrs. John R. Drexel, Mrs. French Vanderbilt, Mrs. Reginald Norman Pembroke Jones entertained. Many others assembled at the fashionable clubs.

Aerial Cabs for Aviator's Wedding

PARIS, June 10.—While Miss Dorothy Taylor, the piquant American, is flying around Paris purchasing her extensive trousseau, others are planning a startling innovation for the day of her wedding to Claude Grahame-White, aviator. Some of the guests who attend the nuptials at the little Wilford Church in Chelmsford, Essex, may arrive in staid horse-drawn carriages or flashy automobiles, but a considerable delegation is going to descend from the skies in airships.

"Tommy" Sopwith, Gustave Hamel, the cross-channel aeronaut, and "Jimmy" Valentine are among the airmen who have arranged to go to the wedding in aeroplanes. Each will carry at least one passenger with him, and each will attempt a circular alights in front of the country church, a new fashion for society wedding will have been tried, if not established.

Miss Taylor, who has flown many times with her fiance in the past, has now got her ban on "planing" until after the ceremony. She will not fly or permit him to fly before they are married. It is said she has a peculiar premonition of danger.

The second, beside the bequests gave Dr. George E. Bliss one-half the estate and Miss Eldredge and Mrs. Hyde the balance.

I Am Facing the CRISIS of My Business Career.

HYSLOP GETS SPIRIT MESSAGE

Four Lives Saved by Coast Patrol Boat

NEW YORK, June 10—Carmi D. Wright, former Commissioner of Labor, who died in February, has broken silence for the sale and spoken to human on earth, according to Professor James H. Hyslop. And its all due to "Little Starlight," adds the Professor.

Through the medium of Mrs. Chenoweth, who interviews dead ones for the professor, Little Starlight, in the course of a series of experiments lasting more than a year, has given to Professor Hyslop much information concerning Mr. Wright's mundane life, but unfortunately not a word about his experiences in spirit land.

In this month's issue of his Journal of the American Society for Psychical Research, Professor Hyslop reveals what Mrs. Chenoweth and Little Starlight were able to tell about Mr. Wright. It is peculiar that a perusal of the newspaper clippings relating to Mr. Wright seems to have given the professor even more information about Mr. Wright than Little Starlight and Mrs. Chenoweth succeeded in obtaining despite the spiritual connections.

Medium Didn't Know Wright.

It is peculiar because, as Professor Hyslop says, Mrs. Chenoweth didn't know anything about Mr. Wright, didn't even know whom she was talking to when under Little Starlight's guidance, though of course Professor Hyslop did.

However, the professor had a lot of nice long chats with Little Starlight, who is exceedingly garrulous, he says, and delights to inject much of the "ambitional" into those spiritual conversations. Professor Hyslop rather meaningly, one might say, leaves out all this personal talk with Little Starlight as the adjustable theory that "it might appear offensive to many readers."

"Calculais His God."

Little Starlight said that the former labor commissioner was great at figures. "Calculais was his God," said the control.

After that Little Starlight said he was deeply interested in finding out about Mr. Wright and had a laboratory where he conducted experiments on the subject. Nobody has been found who can tell Professor Hyslop where the laboratory was, and Little Starlight simply refuses to find out.

Professor Hyslop also learned that Mr. Wright was fond of spending vacation time at the seashore, and that he "loved humanity and was interested in the problem."

At one sitting Little Starlight came near to hitting the idea the professor says, that when Mr. Wright was ordered to bed at the inception of his last illness he was fully dressed. Little Starlight's notion was that when Mr. Wright died he had all his clothes on.

Word was received in Boston today of the rescue of three men and a seven-year-old boy in the ocean off Ipswich Bay, by Captain George Hill and the crew of the United States volunteer life savers patrol boat "Grace L." The men and boy were in a fishing dory which had been driven off shore in a gale. When discovered the oars had been lost and the dory was unmanageable.

The three men gave Captain Hill these names: Henry Long, John Lister and S. Russell. The name of the boy was not given.

Both the occupants of the dory were taken almost into Grace L and carried to Newburyport.

CHRISTIANS HELD AS HOSTAGES BY TURKS

PARIS, June 10—The Havas News Agency reported that the Turks have seized all the Christians between the rivers of Smirna and forty-five on the island of Mitylene in the Archipelago, as hostages. It is intimated that Turkey will kill the prisoners unless the powers bring pressure to bear upon Italy to release Turkish territory seized in the Aegean Sea. Two French newspapers at Beirut, Syria, have been suppressed by the Turks.

SENATOR TOWNE BETTER.

NEW YORK, June 10—The condition of Charles A. Towne, formerly United States Senator from Minnesota, was reported today to be less serious.

3 TOWNS HOLD BIRTHDAY FETE

Arlington, Buckland and Watertown have joined in the celebration, to last all this week, of the 200th anniversary of old Arlington, from which the towns have sprung. The observance will last until Saturday.

With the ringing of bells in all the churches the celebration opened. Many residents were astir early, and the bells were rung for fifteen minutes.

Troopers dressed in colonial costumes, and headed by Chief Marshal Alfred W. Bradford, marched from Union square, Buckland, to an arch spanning Union street, in front of the First Congregational church, where Mr. Donovan read the proclamation of the celebration.

After the Buckland contingent paraded to South Arlington Centre Arlington and Watertown, where the proclamation was read again.

In Buckland, at the First Baptist Church, addresses were given by the pastor, the Rev. C. A. Burgess, and former pastors.

At the Holy Family church, Buckland, there was solemn high mass. At the First Church of Christ, Scientist, there was a special service. At the Old Congregational Church a historical service was conducted by Judge George W. Kelley. At the Methodist Episcopal Church a commemorative sermon was given. At the Unitarian Church a sermon was given by Albert J. Kennedy.

In Arlington, at St. Bridget's Church, a solemn mass was celebrated. At the First Church of Christ, Scientist, there was a special service. At the Old Congregational Church a historical service was given. At the New Jerusalem Church a special service was conducted by the Reverend Paul Sperry. Old Home Sunday was observed at the First Universalist Church.

At the First Baptist Church in the North district a historical address was delivered by the Rev. W. W. Bessey of Amesbury. At the Fourth Congregational Church a historical address was delivered by Alonzo Avery.

In Watertown, at the Advent Church, the Reverend A. H. Ericson spoke on "Commencement Reminiscences." A historical address was delivered by the Reverend Morris B. Nash of Hanover at the First Baptist Church. The Reverend W. W. Dornan of the Congregational Church spoke on "Our Heritage." The Reverend F. L. Streeter of the Methodist Church spoke on "The Moral and Spiritual Significance of Our Celebration." At the Unitarian Church the Pastor, spoke on "The Early History of Whitman."

STEAM ROLLER AGAIN AT WORK

they will be able to get men on the credentials committee from some of the States where they have lost their contests that will not be unfavorable to them in the convention hearing.

If the fight is lost in the credentials committee and in the convention, the Roosevelt delegates, claiming that they express the will of the people because the bulk of them were selected by the voters themselves, will organize their own convention.

Expert political mechanicians went carefully over the Taft steam roller this forenoon and pronounced it fully capable of continuing its journey despite the work given it last week when it flattened seventy-two contesting Roosevelt delegates and hauled the same number of Taft delegates safely through to their goal.

There was a feeling, however, that the crisis was at hand today and that the steam roller would not have such easy rolling as marked its progress through the Southern States.

Squabble Over California.

The threat of the Taft people to require the entire California delegation was sidetracked immediately after the session began when in a squabble over the question whether the contest in the fourth district should be heard. A motion by Senator Borah, seating all the delegates except those contested in the fourth district, was carried. The fourth was the only California district in which a contest had been filed. Committeeman Knight of California demanded when the committee met that this contest be taken up at once. Despite Mr. Knight's demand, the California case was put over to Wednesday.

The vote on this motion was the nearest approximation of a victory the Roosevelt party has won in the committee. While it did not add any to the colonel's string of delegates, it showed that in one instance the Roosevelt men had shaken the nerve of the steam roller engineers.

"POLICE! POLICE!"

By James J. Montague.

"What landed in the street just now?"
A startled stranger cried.
"A Georgia Roosevelt delegate."
The veteran replied.
"They're walloping the Colonel; you can hear Joe Dixon roar
From the lobby of the Congress to the Minnesota shore,
And despite his ululations they will wallop him some more,
When they trot out the steam roller in the morning."

"Why should they do such awful things?"
The startled stranger cried.
"They shouldn't. But what's that to them?"
The veteran replied.
"They say that they are doing it for William Howard Taft.
But really they are laboring to keep their ancient graft,
Which they have got small chance to hold unless the Colonel's gaffed
Effectively and deftly in the morning."

"Of course the Colonel doesn't mind,"
The startled stranger cried,
"Oh, no; he doesn't mind at all,"
The veteran replied.
"He's merely loading fifty guns and whetting ninety knives,
And coming to Chicago after certain persons' lives.
There'll be abundance doing from the jump when he arrives,
Which ought to be about convention morning."

ROOSEVELT ELATED BY NEWS; MAY NOT GO TO CONVENTION

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., June 10.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was very much elated today over private information brought to him from Chicago, and there were indications that the ex-President considered that it would be unnecessary for him to go West for the meeting of the Republican National Committee, or the convention.

George W. Perkins returned last night from Chicago and today the Colonel held a long telephone conversation with him. Afterward Colonel Roosevelt met the newspaper men with a beaming countenance. Asked about a report that a special train had been engaged to leave for Chicago with Colonel Roosevelt on board, the former President issued the following statement:

"I know of no such plan. No word of any such thing has come to me. I do not know at this time that I am going to Chicago at all. If I go, I don't know when it will be. I do not know that it is going to be necessary for me to make the trip at all."

OPEN DIVORCE COURT.

Judge Jenney opened the June term of the Suffolk Superior divorce session today. The contested cases, of which there are thirty-nine, are tried first. The eighty-two uncontested cases followed on the list.

CONVENTION SIDELIGHTS

CHICAGO, June 10.—Even if Roosevelt bolts the convention there will be at least one vote that will still be cast persistently in the Coliseum meeting for him. It will be cast by State Senator Francis P. Brady of Illinois. Senator Brady won't bolt.

"What would you do if Roosevelt did bolt?" he was asked.

"Sit tight in my seat in the Coliseum," he replied.

"How would you vote? What about your Roosevelt instructions?"

"I still would vote for Roosevelt if I was the only man left in the convention that was voting that way," Senator Brady said. "A bolt won't help the party in November, hence my attitude."

Leave Your Houn' at Home.

Delegates and their wives who figured they could not possibly leave their household pets behind them when they came to the convention had better make careful arrangements. Managers of the principal hotels today decided that all dogs would be barred. They have been swamped with letters asking information regarding the entertainment of dogs.

"I would advise them to leave their houn' at home if they don't want him kicked aroun'," said Clerk Schaefer of the Auditorium Hotel.

Tawney Hankers to Run Roller.

Former Congressman James A. Tawney is among the nation's notables who are seen frequently about the hotel lobbies. He is a star rapid-fire Marathon talker and usually is engaged in earnest conversation. "I understand you are here to run the steam roller, Mr. Tawney," suggested a reporter subtly.

"You do, eh," grunted Mr. Tawney. "Well, let me tell you something, young man. If they want a driver for that machine they couldn't get a better man than I am. The first job I ever had was running a traction engine, and I made good, and I'm not out of practice, either. My application is in now, and if a first-class, sober, steady and hard working driver is really wanted for that rolling thing, I'll undertake to roll it all over the convention."

Murphy Goes to Ball Game.

Franklin Murphy, formerly Governor of New Jersey, and now a Republican committeeman, went to Chairman Victor Rosewater yesterday with a long and sad face. "Victor," he said, "I'm sick. I've got a fearful headache and this air is making it worse. I feel badly I tell you." Rosewater was all sympathy.

"Can I get you a doctor, or what shall we do?" he said.

"No, Vic," said Murphy, "the fact is I'm just too sick to sit in the committee room and just well enough to go to the ball game. I want to be excused."

So he went and took Hart of Iowa with him, but, not to cripple the strong points they left their proxies with Senator Crane.

A Kaleidoscope of Humanity.

Startling combinations in dress are to be seen in the Congress Hotel lobby, where the East and West meet these days to "swap politics."

From Colonel Hamilton Lewis, arrayed in all his hirsute adornment, to the man with the celluloid collar and the ever-present pocket comb, there is a variety that always is changing.

Dr. N. B. Siser, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I object to what are called patent medicines, where maker alone knows what ingredients are put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use."

GRAND TRUNK VICTORY FOR THE PEOPLE IS WON

The Grand Trunk bill means that the Southern New England Railroad Company—all of whose capital stock is now owned by the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada and at least fifty-one per cent of whose stock must always be owned by the Grand Trunk—is authorized to build three railway lines to Massachusetts:

1—From the New Hampshire boundary down to the Port of Boston.

2—From the town of Uxbridge to the city of Worcester.

3—From Blackstone north to Boston.

The Southern New England is today building from Palmer in Massachusetts to Providence in Rhode Island. The Grand Trunk was already located at Palmer through control of the New London Northern Railroad, running from New London, Conn., 121 miles north to Brattleboro in Vermont.

The bill signed today by Governor Foss will lapse and become void unless within one year from today the Southern New England has filed its "locations" with the Board of Railroad Commissioners, if construction has not been begun within a year after the Commissioners have fixed upon the route, and if the lines are not completed within three years after construction starts. Under the terms of the act, however, the Commissioners have power to grant an extension of time.

Other Roads Affected.

Permission to build the line from Blackstone up to Boston connecting Boston and Providence may be withheld by the Railroad Commissioners until the Southern New England has given satisfactory assurances that it means first to build from New Hampshire to Boston.

Certain provisions of the act apply to all Massachusetts railroads alike, to the Boston & Albany, the Boston & Maine and the New Haven, as well as to the Grand Trunk. Among these "general" provisions is that by which the railroads are permitted to issue bonds to twice the amount of their capital stock. At present they may issue bonds to an amount equal to the capital stock. The bonds of today, however, are merely "debentures," or promissory notes, with nothing back of them save the promise to pay. Bonds in excess of the present limit must hereafter be secured by mortgage on the railroads.

Another general provision of the bill, applying to all the roads alike, permits them to hold the stock and securities of terminal companies and acquire and operate steamship companies, ferries, ferry boats and docks.

And so has ended the greatest popular campaign the people of New England have ever known.

On every side it is admitted that the Grand Trunk Railway is coming to Boston by permission of the Legislature only because the people demand it. It is quite as freely admitted by men who know about such matters that without the popular movement for "another railroad" the Grand Trunk bill wouldn't have had the ghost of a show.

AMERICAN Led the Fight.

The Grand Trunk is coming to Boston because 100,000 readers of the AMERICAN, petitioning the Grand Trunk to come, indicated to the Grand Trunk management the existence of an undeniable sentiment down here in favor of another railroad.

It was early realized by the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada that there was no hope of its finding a way into Boston without this popular support.

The first official message to the AMERICAN was that the Grand Trunk would come "if the people of Massachusetts wanted it to come."

The AMERICAN'S answer was the forwarding of the petitions of 100,000 readers of this newspaper.

The rest is history, and, inasmuch as the campaign was not inaugurated until April of last year and the crisis of the legislative battle was reached and passed only within the past ten days, very recent history.

At the suggestion of the AMERICAN, the House and the Senate of last year extended unanimous invitations to the Grand Trunk. More than half of those legislators came back to the Legislature of the present year.

Welcomed by City of Boston.

The Boston City Council followed suit. The aldermen and councilmen of cities and the selectmen of towns all up and down the State were next in order.

The Boston Chamber of Commerce took a most important part in bringing the Grand Trunk to Boston. To the transportation expert of the chamber, Mr. David O. Ives, a railroad man of vast experience, is due as much credit as belongs to any other individual booster. In the closing days of the campaign the modest Mr. Ives was the subject of a hot blast from President Mellen of the New Haven. Mr. Mellen apparently thought he knew whom to blame most for the beginning of real railroad competition in New England.

The demand of the people would not down. In city after city, and town after town, the board of trade or the local chamber of commerce named committees to represent them in the movement. The Associated Boards of Trade of Essex County, the Haverhill board, the Lowell board and the Worcester board were particularly persistent and powerful.

The Grand Trunk was equally fortunate in its counsel. No more polished and convincing argument has ever been made at the State House than that of Moorfield Storey, Esq., for the Southern New England, or Grand Trunk. Storey, former president of the American Bar Association and long-time secretary to Charles Sumner, was a knight sans peur et sans reproche. The Grand Trunk right ought to have been won on Storey's argument alone.

The People Victorious.

The Grand Trunk had other able counsel in the persons of Judge Thomas W. Kenrick of Palmer and the Hon. Charles S. Baxter of Boston, former Mayor of Medford. Judge Kenrick was a member of the Legislature some years ago. Mayor Baxter was recently one of the leaders of the Roosevelt movement in Massachusetts. It was Baxter who outgeneraled the foes of the new railroad in the closing days of the fight by turning the bright light of publicity upon the attempt to use the name of the Chamber of Commerce against the project.

The chances are that the older railroads were this year as strong as ever at the State House, particularly in the Senate. But the popular will was not to be denied.

Deep down was the popular belief that the existing railroad monopoly having taken off trains, laid off men, introduced "rubber miles," and been the subject of many complaints of delayed freight, was not giving New England a square deal.

Piled upon this was the Grand Trunk petition, the invitations of Legislature and city governments and the resolutions of shippers and business interests generally as represented by boards of trade and similar organizations.

Nobody reasonably expects that the Grand Trunk Railway will be a wonder worker. Nobody reasonably expects that the Grand Trunk comes to Boston without capital will be laid in Unitarian Hall whose the plan to make a dollar. But everybody expects that the Grand Trunk will help Boston and New England and will do more than has yet been done to aid in the development of the port.

Already in New England.

The Grand Trunk is already in New England in the line from Portland, Maine, up to Island Pond Vermont, a distance of 150 miles, which crosses northern New Hampshire.

The Grand Trunk owns more than two-thirds of the stock of the Central Vermont, whose main line extends 177 miles from St. John's P. Q., down to Windsor, Vermont. And the Central Vermont, Grand Trunk-owned, holds a lease of the New London Northern, 121 miles from Brattleboro down to the bound at New London.

The lines of the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada, owner of the Southern New England, amount to 4,745 miles. And the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada will control the Grand Trunk Pacific, 3,544 miles, from Moncton, New Brunswick, to Quebec, Winnipeg, through to Port Rupert on the Pacific.

The main point today is that the bill has been signed and that the Grand Trunk must complete the work of construction within five years. At the end of that period Boston will be the only port in the United States of the first class with direct connections to the Pacific coast.

MGR. MILLERICK PASSES AWAY

Rt. Rev. Mgr. Jeremiah E. Millerick, rector of St. Joseph's Church in the West End, a member of Cardinal O'Connell's Council, and one of the most beloved priests in Boston, died at 3:35 o'clock today at the parish house, No. 8 Allen street.

Monsignor Millerick was suddenly stricken on the evening of May 24, while a reunion was held in honor of the fortieth anniversary of his ordination in the priesthood. Since he was stricken ill until death came the pastor had shown no signs of improvement.

At Monsignor Millerick's side when death came were his brother, Rev. William J. Millerick of Stoneham, his physician, Dr. Frederick Good, and these priests of the parish, Rev. James Courtney, Rev. P. J. McCormick, Rev. J. J. Smith, Rev. Walter Roche, and relatives and members of the household.

Monsignor Millerick was born in Ireland in 1846 and came to this country with his parents when he was four years old.

Harvard Is Assured Rotch Observatory

Mrs. A. Lawrence Rotch, widow of Professor Rotch of Harvard, today declared that she would support the Blue Hill Observatory as her husband did, and see that the Observatory eventually becomes the property of Harvard University, as her husband planned.

"I shall carry out my husband's wishes in this matter," said Mrs. Rotch. "He wished the observatory to go to Harvard. He left a fund for its support. An additional revenue is necessary. This I will supply, and shall continue to supply, and the observatory will eventually become the property of the university."

25 ESCAPE FIRE IN BROCKTON BLOCK

BROCKTON, June 10.—Twenty-five people were driven by fire from the Corcoran block at the corner of Main and Allen streets today. An explosion, thought to have been caused by a lighted cigarette in the tailoring shop of Hezikah Allen, started the fire. The damage was about $7,000.

JOHN D.'S DAUGHTER RESIGNS PRESIDENCY

CHICAGO, June 10.—Mrs. Harold F. McCormick, daughter of John D. Rockefeller, has resigned the presidency of the Chicago Theatre Society. She declines to discuss her resignation, which, it is understood, is a result of heated discussion regarding the nationality of the plays to be produced under the subsidy of the society.

EXPECTED NO HELP BUT RECEIVED IT

Boston Man Surprised by Rapid Action of Tonic.

P. F. Malone, of 42 Lynd St., Boston, has this to say after taking the new tonic Tona Vita a few weeks:

"I did not expect this medicine to help me, because I have been disappointed so often I have lost faith in everything. I have been sick for about three years—not sick enough to go to bed, only feeling miserable all the time. I was all run down, was nervous, and had no strength. I was always thinking something terrible was about to happen, and tossed about at night instead of sleeping. I did not feel refreshed in the morning, but was tired before I had begun the day.

"I kept reading about this Tona Vita, but thought it was like all the rest and would not try it. One day I read of a man who said that it had done great things for him, and he described his case exactly like mine, so I decided to try it.

"I took the medicine and it helped me from the first. I find Tona Vita all that is claimed for it. It is great. My health is now as good as anybody's."

The tonic Tona Vita is new to the American public, although a similar preparation was extraordinarily successful abroad. The tonic contains no harmful ingredients of any sort and is pleasant to take.

Tona Vita has been on sale in Boston less than a month, and already it is in greater demand than any other medicine now being sold in this city. Leading druggists state that they are astonished by its instant success. As a striking example, employees in most of the leading drug stores in Boston are now taking the tonic. The manager in one of the big down-town drug stores recently said: "During the past week we have sold eleven bottles of Tona Vita to our clerks, who wished to take the tonic after hearing what customers had to say of the preparation. This is a record, nothing of the sort ever having occurred at this store before."

A worn-out, run-down, nervous man or woman who will take this tonic one week is certain to admit it to be a wonderful preparation. Tona Vita is on sale at all leading Boston drug stores.

Being a Deliberate Attempt to Tell You What You Don't Know About Your Teeth

There are good and sufficient reasons why you should not use the ordinary largely advertised tooth preparations which contain chalk and other gritty substances together with strong flavoring materials and irritants added to cover offensive odors caused by decaying teeth.

Equally good reasons can be given why ordinary solution of hydrogen peroxide should not be used. The acids it contains are too harsh and exert an injurious effect upon the teeth and gums.

The United States Government has granted a process patent exclusively to the Peroxide Products Co., New York, for their method of retaining oxygen in Dentyne Peroxide Paste and Powder. Oxygen liberated when used as in Dentyne Peroxide acts as nature's deodorizer, germicide and bleach. It is the one preparation that not only cleanses and preserves the teeth, but also makes them snowy white.

The rate of increase was not maintained in May on account of continued wet weather.

Judging by the first week, June 1912 will exceed even these remarkable records.

Dreyfus Is Confident of O'Toole

Says $22,500 Star Will Deliver

COLONEL BARNEY DREYFUS isn't afraid to tell you that he will enjoy the last laugh at the O'Toole scoffers. Barney's record-breaking price, his open staking of reputation that the ex-St. Paul pitcher is the marvel of years, is known the circuit over. Hundreds of bugs and as many paragraphers have spun sarcastic slaps at Dreyfus simply because the National League opposition, following the Giants' example, are "waiting out" the red-haired spit-baller, to his detriment. Every batsman seeks to get O'Toole in a hole by spurning his early offerings. It paid New York and Boston to play this game and the chuckles that stirred the country stirred Colonel Dreyfus to prophecy making. "That's all right," said he, "let them keep up their waiting racket. Marty will get control some of these days and what a fall there will be, my countrymen." With this the Pittsburg magnate reiterated that "no slab artist ever showed him more than O'Toole and his money was well spent."

THE question has arisen that, as well conditioned as the Giants were to start the championship season this Spring, if their tear-'em-to-pieces, hurricane style of play that they have followed so constantly and consistently so far will not slow them up and play them out before they have the pennant cinched. It is a question, too, if they are not feeling the ill effects of their rapid pace already. Injuries and lameness are piling up among them at a rather startling rate.

Without doubt it is McGraw's present plan of campaign to force his players to their utmost right now. That has been shown so many times during their play up to date that it is self evident. There is no let up at all by any of his players, with the possible exception of the pitchers, even if the Giants have a decisive lead over their opponents. The base runners try to pilfer just as many bases when they have a big lead as when they are battling in a close game.

Every player wants to hit the ball safely, and puts forth his best efforts to do so, whether the game is a slaughter or a fight. There is no shirking of hard flies or grounders. In fact, the Giants are up on their very nimble tip toes from start to finish.

On certain occasions the second and even the third string men have been put in to give the regulars a rest, but the original speed with which the team starts a game never diminishes.

McGraw is saving of his fielders as far as possible, for he, more than anyone else, appreciates the strain they are under, but up to this time he has not taken out any of his pitchers unless they have wobbled enough to make them look dangerous if they were kept in.

But with the generous bunch of nifty substitutes the Giants are at present fortified with there is not much need to borrow trouble. There will be plenty of time afforded, according to the present aspect of the race, for any tiring Giants to be given rest enough to prevent them from becoming dangerously stale. Anyhow, it is a safe bet that when the bridge has to be crossed, if such a time does arrive, the Giants will have pontoons ready, if they be necessary. And what games the Giants have already won are theirs without any doubt, while the other fellows have got to win theirs.

THE Giants' runaway with the lead in less than two months after the start affords an object lesson of how important it is for a manager to have his team leave the training camp in the physical condition that will enable them to get the jump on the other fellows. That has always been the plan the Giants' leader has followed. He was more successful this season than ever before, but it was not due to luck, as many other managers and friends of other clubs are wont to throw out as an "alibi." It was McGraw's system of training and care for the players.

The Giants had no better weather in Marlin, Texas, than most of the other teams. They had a shade on the St. Louis Cardinals, no doubt, for they were put to sore straits whenever they decided to tempt fate, but there were many more rainy days in Marlin this Spring than there were exactly suitable for practice, but a little rain never did prevent the Giants from getting out and hustling at some kind of a training stunt. McGraw had his players adapt themselves to the existing conditions, good or bad. If the playing field was not in shape, then the handball court was utilized, or long runs taken.

There was no stagnant loafing around the hotel and the players' health was carefully looked after.

Marlin afforded no better advantages than the managers in other places could have secured with some hustling.

Professional ball players will never get out and do training in the Spring unless they are prodded to their work—at least the big majority of them will not. No excuses went with McGraw. Every player was ordered out in all kinds of weather, unless absolutely unable to, and the regulars were given no more leeway than the youngsters from the bushes who were in camp for try-outs.

No other manager than McGraw has looked as far ahead as next Spring to obviate the danger that may accrue next Spring from unsuitable weather. At Emerson Park, in Marlin, plans are being drawn now for the erection of a long, low covered building that the pitchers and catchers can use on rainy days. New handball and tennis courts will be constructed in the fallaway slide, a most valuable adjunct to successful base running, as the Giants have so well proven.

It is the manager who looks ahead and makes provision for any and all sorts of weather and conditions that shows his worth by results.

Baseball Notes

Charley Comiskey, owner of the White Sox, has written a personal friend in Columbus to inquire into the habits of George McQuillan. He was given to understand that McQuillan is going the right path this year and he may open negotiations for the former Major leaguer. Columbus, of course, would not let him go unless something pretty good were sent in return.

Harry Lumley was handed his release as manager of the Binghamton baseball team by officers of the association. He was immediately offered a contract as a player, but decided not to accept.

George Stone, the once mighty batter of the American League, has been unconditionally released by Manager McCreerie, of the Portland club. Stone's batting eye has apparently gone entirely.

That Harry Davis was wise in getting rid of a perpetual candidate for manager and that R. Wallace was foolish in acquiring one has been demonstrated. Wallace has been canned as manager of the Browns, and George Stovall, late manager of the Naps, has succeeded him. We wish him joy, with a full realization of the fact that he will probably have little.

Guy Zinn, most sensational of Highland youngsters, was dug out of the bush by Charley Babb three years ago, and played part of the season with Memphis.

Baker now holds a record for Chicago. He is the only player to put a ball over the right-field fence at the home of the White Sox.

It cost Pittsburg only sixty cents for a telegram to pick Hendrix off the Kansas lots. Hendrix's near-balk motion is worth a hundred night telegrams a month.

Russell Blackburne has been suspended for a run-in with the umpire at Chicago. Around Palmyra, N. J., where Russ lives, he never did anything like that.

Ernest Vinson, a baseball player, formerly of Providence and Cleveland and who was active in the game until last season, went violently insane at his home in Chester, Pa. It required the efforts of four patrolmen to place him under arrest. In his ravings Vinson broke up furniture and severely beat his wife.

G. B. League Notes

Manager Reynolds of the Somerville Greater Boston League team has made but two changes since the opening of the season. Other managers in the circuit have made numerous shifts.

Since the opening of the season four of the six teams in the circuit—Lynn, Malden-Medford, Everett-Chelsea and Somerville—have been for a brief time undisputed leaders, and the other teams, South Boston and Dorchester, have been tied for first place. The teams are all about of equal strength.

Shaughnessy, Dorchester's hard-hitting third sacker, who has been out of the game on account of injuries, has returned to the line-up.

Johnny Evers' brother, Joe, who is playing third base for the Everett-Chelsea Greater Boston League team, looks like a coming big leaguer.

OFFICIAL NEW ENGLAND LEAGUE AVERAGES

By WILLIAM P. PETERS.

DeGroff of Lowell Is Real Batting Leader of League with Bowcock Second.

DeGroff of the Lowell team is the real leader of the New England League at the close of the seventh week of the season of 1912. DeGroff is clouting the sphere for the splendid average of .382 in thirty-three games.

Bowcock of Fall River is second among the regulars, with .361, while Malcolm Barry of Brockton is third, with the mark of .347.

DeGroff is the first player to make fifty hits, and is well up among the run getters, is first in base stealing and first in home run clouts.

Walsh is the leading run getter, with thirty-seven. J. Sullivan of Brockton is the premier sacrifice hitter, having laid down successfully sixteen bunts. Luyster, Phoenix and Aubrey are tied in the two-base hits, each having made ten. Luyster and Boultes have each made five triples.

A very peculiar thing is that, while Lawrence has been leading the league for several weeks, the team is last in team batting and seventh in team fielding.

The leading hitters of each team are: Lawrence, Luyster, .336; Brockton, Barry, .347; Worcester, Jacobs, .312; Lynn, Murch, .333; New Bedford, Maranville, .320; Lowell, DeGroff, .382; Fall River, Bowcock, .361; Haverhill, Courtney, .328.

In the pitchers' records, Keating loses first place, Van Dyke now having a clear hold on first, having won ten and lost two. Van Dyke has now won one more than Keating and also lost one less.

Griffith of New Bedford must not be overlooked this season. He has won eight out of ten games, losing his second game this week. Brignolia of Brockton, Harrington of Lynn and Howard of Lawrence are doing good work on the slab.

Wolfgang, who only lost five games all last season, has already lost five this year, but he has been twirling good ball and is bound to climb up with the leading pitchers before many weeks have passed.

Yount, who was let go by Lowell, has proved a find for Worcester, and since joining Burkett's team he has won three games, helping Worcester to strengthen a weak pitching staff.

Lowell pulled off the trade of Bill Cooney to Haverhill for First Sacker Eddie McGamwell during the week, and the acquisition of such a sticker as McGamwell is sure to start Lowell on its way to the first division.

The following are the figures of W. P. Peters of Lawrence, compiler of the official averages of the New England League, and they include the work of all players who have taken part in five games or more, and where they have played with one or more teams the work is complete, but they are registered with the team with which they are now playing:

TRIS HAD BIG DAY WITH STICK

ST. LOUIS, June 10.—Tris Speaker, the wonderful outfielder of the Red Sox, was pretty near the whole thing in yesterday's contest, which was captured by the visitors through a deadly use of their war clubs.

In five times at bat Speaker lined out a single, a double, a triple and a home run. His performance brought forth repeated cheers from the big Sunday crowd that witnessed the game.

In addition to Speaker, little Marty Krug came in for a good portion of attention and applause. The youngster not only fielded well, but he drove out three hits in four times up, one a two-sacker.

In the third inning, while sliding into second base, Krug twisted his ankle. It swelled up badly, and while he played the game out, he was in great pain at the end and may be out of the lineup for a few days.

Jake Stahl was back at first and fielded his position in rare form, making one great stop at full reach with one hand and cracking out a safe drive.

Wagner made two remarkable plays and the all-round fielding of the visitors was full of pepper and perfectly executed, including a great throw by Lewis to the plate, where he nipped a runner from second.

Bedient was wild at times and was hit quite freely, but he managed to tighten up and keep his opponents from turning in the timely drives. Harry Hooper was the only Boston man to go without a hit, and he hit the ball very hard, but at the fielders.

PILGRIMS MEET THE CARDINALS

The Pilgrims will make a valiant effort to break their long losing streak today at the expense of the St. Louis Cardinals. Rajah Bresnahan and his band from the Mound City will open up a four-game series at the Walpole Street grounds and it is now or never with the local band.

Several games have been lost to the Pilgrims by the hardest kind of luck. The breaks in the game have not come their way and so they have been nosed out by the narrowest margins in more than one contest recently.

There is one good sign about the team, however, which has pleased Manager Kling, and that is the boys are beginning to hit the ball.

With the addition of O'Rourke, late of the Bridgeport club, at shortfield today, it is hoped that a weak spot in the defence will be materially strengthened.

A determined effort is being made to build up the team, and new faces are apt to be seen in the near future. The weeding out has started, with the sales of Spratt and McTigue to the Buffalo club.

Perdue or Hess will face the Cards this afternoon.

Hal Chase Will Not Figure in a Trade

CHICAGO, June 10.—Manager Harry Wolverton of the New York Americans, brands as a falsehood the rumor that he is considering a trade of Hal Chase and Russell Ford for Rollie Zeider and Ed Walsh. The rumor is supposed to have been started in New York.

"The tale is so ridiculous that it does not merit denial," said Wolverton, "but I'm sick and tired to death of the way these stories are floating around. They infer that there is trouble between myself and Chase and that Hal is on the market. Once again I declare that Chase will play in New York or nowhere as long as I am manager.

"As to the other part of the story, that involving Ford and Walsh, it is too silly for anything. I consider Ford one of the greatest pitchers in baseball, yes, as great as Walsh. Ford is just beginning his career; brilliant as he still is, Walsh cannot last very much longer. For several seasons he has pitched double the number of games most twirlers attempt. I am looking for stars, not trying to dispose of them."

HARVARD COACHES SATISFIED WITH SHOWING OF CREWS

HARVARD CREW PLEASES COACH

RED TOP, Ct., June 10.—General satisfaction is felt in the Harvard rowing camp just a week from the close of time rowing on the Thames.

Tests made daily of the three crews indicate that all are up to the standard of recent Harvard boats and, as the Crimson shell have swept the Thames for four years, the only logic used by the Harvard coaches in sizing up the situation is expressed by one of the leading coaches here as follows:

"Yale will have to be much stronger than usual in order to finish in a single event this year."

The varsity eight, a veteran aggregation with five former intercollegiate rowers on the benches, came here last Monday, a beautifully drilled organization. Time rows have been given every night during last week, four of them over the entire four miles. Under only fair conditions one evening the eight registered twenty-one minutes, establishing the speed and power of the crew beyond doubt.

A few technical details of watermanship are being polished up by Coach Jim Wray. They lie chiefly in the shortening of the stroke, incident to the preparation for the race with Cornell and Princeton over a two-mile course. There is a tendency in the Harvard boats to all clip their strokes, but a great improvement in this defect was noted within a week.

The freshman crew is one of the lightest class boats seat here recently, but it has held the varsity even in two-mile trials continually since the squad came here.

Harvard's entire squad is a group of perfectly conditioned oarsmen. The indisposition of Captain Trumbull of the 1915 crew kept him from his seat at No. 6 three or four days, but he has entirely recovered and has resumed his seat.

Harvard has decided upon a definite change in naval equipment and in all probability an English shell will be used in the varsity eight race with Yale. It has been tried daily by the regulars in their practice since their arrival with satisfactory results.

For four years Harvard has won the varsity eight event, and for the first time in the history of rowing indications are that this season will mark a fifth consecutive victory.

RALPH ROSE MAY NOT GO TO SWEDEN

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—There is a persistent rumor here that Ralph Rose, champion weight thrower of the world, will not be a member of the Yankee team that is to go to Stockholm the latter part of this month.

Rose is averse to going so far away from home and for so long a time, as his business is prospering and he does not care to leave it.

Olympic Marathon Men Chosen
Four Boston Runners in the List

is interesting to note that four hail from Greater Boston.

DeMar, winner of the classic B. A. A. Marathon in 1911, although he did not compete in last Marathon was picked on his record. Piggott, Lilly and Soxalexis are all members of the North Dorchester O. C., one of the best long-distance clubs in the country.

100 Metre Selections.

To represent the United States in the 100 metre event the following were chosen: F. V. Deiate, Chicago A. C.; R. J. Courtney, Seattle; Ralph C. Craig, Detroit; H. P. Drew, Springfield, Mass.; P. C. Gerhardt, Olympic Club, San Francisco; H. L. Lang, a Rhodes scholar of Oxford, Eng.; R. B. Thomas, Princeton; and Clement P. Wilson, Coe College.

On the supplementary list for this event were placed Hal Holland, St. Francis Xavier A. C.; D. L. Lippincott, University of Pennsylvania; A. T. Meyer, Irish-American A. C.; and Charles A. Rice of the Powder Point High School, Duxbury, Mass.

New England will be well represented among the members of the team. At the meet in the Stadium Saturday, the local athletes showed to great advantage and a large number are certain to be found on board the steamer Finland, when it sails from New York on Friday, with the greatest team of athletes ever gathered together.

America's premier athletic honors are sure to be upheld at Stockholm during the great athletic carnival.

While the largest number of American athletes at Stockholm will be Eastern men, the tryouts at Evanston Saturday averaged up pretty well with the meet at the Stadium.

In all track events up to the 1,500-meter, and also in the high hurdles, as good or better times were made than those recorded here.

Wilson of Coe College won the sprint in 11 1-5 seconds, but took his qualifying heat in 10 4-5 seconds, which was H. P. Drew's time at the Stadium.

Broke the Record.

In the 200-metre Cook of Cleveland tied the world's record, 21 3-5 seconds. Craig's winning time at the Stadium was 22 seconds.

Ira Davenport, Chicago University's star runner, took the 800-meter in 1.54 1-5, against Mel Sheppard's 1.55 here.

Whereas the time of Young of Amherst at the Stadium was comparatively slow 49 1-5 seconds for the 400-meter, E. V. Lindberg, the Chicago A. A. and Illinois University runner, turned the trick in 48 3-5 seconds, beating the record.

Case, the Illinois hurdler, did 15 2-5 seconds for the 110-meter hurdles, against 15 3-5 by Blanchard of Bates at the Stadium.

With these men the committee will also have to consider N. J. Patterson, whose performance in the 1,500-meter, 4:02 2-5, was fast indeed, although eclipsed by Abe Kiviat's great flight in 3:55 4-5 here, with Taber of Brown at his heels.

The Western performances in the field events were mediocre. Irons, the Olympic veteran, could only do 22 feet 8¼ inches in the broad jump. Richards, a Utah man, did 6 feet 1 inch in the high.

Pacific Athletes Chosen.

The athletes from San Francisco already chosen and on their way East are F. H. Allen, broad jumper; E. J. Reeson, hurdler, and high jumper; R. H. Bellah, pole vaulter; J. I. Courtney, sprinter; J. J. Donahue, pentathlon events; C. S. Edmundson, middle distance runner; P. C. Gerhardt, sprinter; L. Horine, high jumper; F. W. Kelly, hurdler; Walter McClure, 1,500 meters; Ralph Rose, weights; eleven in all.

Matthew Halpin, manager of the team, who has twice been abroad with American athletes, said after the Stadium meet:

"We can't make it any too strong. We have the best material ever to pick from and the team that sails for Stockholm will be a world-beater. Every one of our try-outs has been a world-beater, and with the bunch all together, we shall be invincible."

The confidence was echoed by every one who has followed the weeks of preparation for the games. The preliminaries come to a climax Saturday with new marks by Lindberg of Chicago for the 400 meters, by Kiviat of New York, and Patterson of Chicago, for the 1,500 meters; by Kramer of the Long Island A. C. for 10,000 meters, and the sensational pole vault record of 13 feet 2¾ inches by Wright of Dartmouth.

Six Olympic Records.

The record of Horine, the high-jumping marvel of the Pacific coast, at six feet seven inches, the wonderful discus throwing by Duncan of New York, and numerous other performances give the American team, which will meet all comers at Stockholm next month, at least six new Olympic records in the events on the Stockholm program and new records in practically all the other athletic events.

The preliminary showing is a remarkable contrast to the English try-outs, where only fair times and distances were made, and the Canadian try-outs Saturday, in which no records were either broken or equalled.

The combined Olympic teams will appear in New York for the first time at the American League Park on Wednesday, forty-eight hours before embarking for Stockholm. It was announced yesterday that H. P. Drew, the negro sprinter of Springfield High School, who flashed into prominence at the Stadium Saturday afternoon by equalling the world's record for 100 meters, as well as Craig of Detroit; Thomas, the intercollegiate champion; Meyer, the national champion, and numerous other sprinters would appear in the dashes.

With such a field, some look to see a new world's record in this event added to the team's credit. The committee in charge is arranging for a demonstration which will be national in its significance. Mayor Gaynor will act as honorary referee, and the athletes will present a flag which the athletes will carry to Stockholm. Diamond-studded gold medals will be given to the winners, with solid gold for second and silver for third places.

James E. Sullivan, chairman of the team selection committee, who witnessed the Stadium performance, was highly pleased with the remarkable records.

"There are so many good men that we shall have to take at least eighty or ninety athletes," said Mr. Sullivan. "Everett Brown is speeding east from Chicago with his personal report on the try-outs in the Middle West and the whole committee will get together today. The full list of selections should be made public by this afternoon."

Together with a few special items such as the revolver competitors, etc., we shall have over 150 Olympic entrants on the Finland when she sails Friday."

Johnny Dundee After Featherweight Title

NEW YORK, June 10.—Johnny Dundee wants to know of any man in this country why he's not entitled to the featherweight championship. Of course, we all know that Johnny Kilbane balances the crown on his throne, but that worries Dundee not a trifle. He's after it, and that's good enough for Dundee. Johnny will probably fight Johnny for the bauble within a few weeks, and when it's all over our Johnny expects to be addressed as respectfully as becomes a champion.

To show that Dundee is a determined youth, it may be said that he has engaged Jack Britton to train him in the future. All that can be said about Britton is that around here he is looked upon as Packey McFarland the second, which by all manner of calculation is quite a boost.

In addition to Britton, Dundee will have the assistance of six other battlers. Britton will teach him the fancy stuff and Dundee will do the rough work. If Dundee can absorb all the knowledge taught by this combination, then the Kilbane days are drawing to a close.

Big Paris Race Won By Belmont's Horse

PARIS, June 10.—August Belmont's Quelle Est Belle II. yesterday won the Prix de Dian (The French Oaks) from a field of twenty horses at the Chantilly course. Edmond Blanck's Porte Maillot was second and W. K. Vanderbilt's Sightly third.

The French Oaks is a 10½ furlong event for three-year-old fillies and was valued this year at $1,400.

Quelle Est Belle II. ruled favorite at 7 to 2; Porte Maillot at 41 to 10 and Sightly at 40 to 1. The race proved one of the most interesting in recent years. Porte Maillot and Quelle Est Belle shot out in front from the start and rapidly outdistanced the field.

Latin School Athlete To Enter West Point

Joseph J. O'Hare of No. 21 Bartlett street, Charlestown, will enter the military academy at West Point next Friday, having been appointed by Congressman Murray.

O'Hare was born in Charlestown, February 19, 1893, and graduated from the Warren Grammar School in 1907. He was a member of the graduating class of the Boston Latin School at the time of his appointment to West Point. He weighs 205 pounds and is six feet and one inch tall. In football he played a strong game at left tackle for the Boston Latin teams of 1909-'10-'11.

McGoorty Is an Ambitious Boxer Seeks to Wear Ketchel's Crown

By JACK CONWAY.

EDDIE McGOORTY of Oshkosh, Wis., is an ambitious chap. The Western boxer is now desirous of winning the middleweight championship of the world. McGoorty believes that he is in a class by himself when it comes to a knowledge of the fine points of the mitt game, and says that inside of a year he will be wearing the crown which has been worn out an owner since Stanley Ketchel met his untimely death.

People who have seen McGoorty box claim that he is one of the classiest middleweights in the game. He is a popular idol throughout the West. He has appeared several times in the East, but has not done as well as he did near his home town.

McGoorty has had a remarkably successful career in the squared circle. Seven years ago last December McGoorty, who was then a short, stocky youngster, entered a prominent bowling club in Milwaukee which was conducting a tournament for the amateur championships of the club.

Eddie approached the promoter of the club and in a few tales said:

"I want to enter the 130-pound class."

"You're too young, my boy," replied the promoter. "You are not sixteen years of age."

"But I can fight," asserted Eddie.

The man was taken back with the lad's enthusiasm and accepted his entry. That was the first amateur contest in which McGoorty ever engaged, and he won the premier laurels in all class, defeating all of his opponents in masterly style.

MCGOORTY was not born with a silver spoon in his mouth, and soon decided to earn a livelihood by boxing. He made good with a vengeance, and has experienced great success ever since. He has engaged in over threescore battles and has met defeat only once. He lost to a boxer by the name of Tom Lancaster at Dublin, Ireland, on December 11, 1909, after twenty rounds of fast fighting.

McGoorty has made a very creditable record in the ring. He started this year by defeating Biggo Kelley. He also bested Jack Dillon.

McGoorty didn't show up well in his recent bout with Bob Moha at New York. He held the Milwaukee "crave dweller" on even terms, but was unable to land a knockout punch.

This was probably due to Moha's method of fighting. Bob is short and rangy and his arms are not any too long. As a result, he has to keep in close or he is doomed to defeat.

When he met McGoorty, he was unable to land many wallops at close quarters and he refused to be led into any, and as a consequence there was a great deal of clinching.

McGoorty is sure that he will win from Jimmy Gardner at the Pilgrim A. A. Wednesday night. Gardner is regarded as being in good condition for the contest, and when the Lowell pride is right, he is a pretty hard man to beat.

THE general public is displaying very little interest in the Johnson-Flynn championship bout which takes place at Las Vegas, New Mexico, on July 4. More than one individual made the trip to Reno two years ago only to see Johnson push poor Jim Jeffries around the ring for fifteen rounds and then send him to the mat for the fatal count. With the result of the Johnson-Jeffries fight fresh in their minds, few sport lovers will make the trip to Las Vegas.

AD WOLGAST is confident that he will be returned the winner over one Joe Rivers when they clash on the coast next month. The bout is scheduled for twenty rounds and the lightweight championship of the world hangs in the balance.

This is the first championship contest in which Wolgast has been one of the principal stars he knocked out Owen Moran almost a year ago. Since that time the stormy Michigan "Whirlwind" has not been operated upon for appendicitis.

Wolgast has done a little boxing during the past six weeks. He has mixed it up in three short, no-decision contests. As Ad Somebody says was with Willie Ritchie and used four rounds. When Wolgast entered the ring with Ritchie he was almost completely exhausted, the odds were about even. Wolgast knocked Ritchie down twice, but the latter had all the best of the boxing at long range. The prince of the 133 pounders then started East and on his way landed a knock by the name of Dundee in a four-round scrap. He met Young Jack O'Brien recently in Philadelphia and he won.

The Cadillac farmer appears to be still in athletic tough customer, and if Rivers does not look out he will be pitted against a couple of the best in the business. Wolgast is due for a sad awakening.

THE managers of Matty Baldwin and Eddie Murphy are still waging a verbal war. For present day boxing man ages are the order of the day in the fistic realm. Murphy wants the weight to be 122 pounds at 2 o'clock. Horace McMahon, manager of Murphy, is right when he declares that ten hours of the "beautiful" is ample time to make weight at 6 o'clock.

YALE OARSMEN SHY OF SPEED

DALES FERRY, Ct., June 10.—Just a few minutes of time work and Yale and her oft-defeated antagonist speed to-day at the three oceans that will race in the annual regatta.

A remarkable situation exists in that the varsity and freshman eights have been held back till the present time and have not yet sent their stroke above thirty in any time trial.

Several changes were made by Coach Courtney, and the oarsmen are trying to change their technique. The aids has been shortened, the blade pull through the water lengthened and the leg drive made more rapid. Each setting in throw the force of the stroke into the shoulder began more accomplished.

With only a week left of time rowing, the absence of records of all the Yale crews is a marked feature of the campaign.

The possibilities of the Yale crew are practically unknown. Cleveland form is shown by the freshman and varsity eights, but both have been beaten.

Since Cook took charge of the varsity eight three weeks ago, a rapid improvement of the boat has been noted, and he says that the question of speed will take care of itself within a fortnight.

Notes of the Links

D. Percy Hammond Kerr, one of the most enthusiastic golfers in managers, and Mr. Hammond has been out on the links every day for the past week at Franklin Park golf course. The fourth Thursday contest was played on the same course at 2 o'clock, before the match was over, and as other contests will be held on the same course this coming week to decide 1912 honors.

A big tourney was held at the Belmont Springs Country Club recently, in which the new members mingled with the old. An entertainment which included a few paid performers and several after dinner speeches that should have been paid for, made the evening most enjoyable for all concerned.

"When Spring Lingers in the Lap of Summer" — By Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1912, by the National News Association

THE Summer moon is here, but the air at night is Spring's breath, cold and hinting of far high snows; Summer's fine, high, blue sky is here with its whipped-cream clouds, but Spring's silver rain still veils it over some days and falls in long, bright strings of crystal beads; Summer's warm, deep fragrant grass is knee-high in the wood meadows, but the frail, tender-colored flowers that gem it over are Spring's very own.

Spring still lingers in sweet Summer's lap.

Fables of the Wise Dame

By DOROTHY DIX

ONCE upon a time there was a Man who, by hustling early and late and always being Johnny-on-the-Spot, succeeded in accumulating a stock of Velf that was an Eye Opener even in State Street.

Except for his Talent for Divorcing others from their Securities, the Man was quite an ordinary Creature, who Preferred Corned Beef and Cabbage to French Entree, and who desired no other Amusement than the Business afforded, but his Wife was a Superior Being with Social Aspirations.

Unfortunately, Society did not seem to miss the lady's Absence from it, and when she tried to break into the Four Hundred, it gave her a welcome that was so much on the Frits that it congealed her Back Teeth.

Now among this Worthy Couple's Assets was a Daughter who had grown up into a Peacherino, with a Willowy Figure, and Peroxide Hair, and Soulful Orbs, and when her Mother observed this she returned thanks to Heaven for all her Mercies, for she had a Hunch that through Daughter she could win out, and Get to Know all the People who Did Not Want to Know Her.

This Frupps Society has gotten on my nerves," she remarked to herself, "but I opine that there is still another Deal coming to me, and that I shall yet have the Best Head Linere on the Run. Happily my Husband has not spent his Life in Doing his Fellow Creatures in Vain, and it is up to us to take a European Coronet out of Soap, and break into the Closed Doors with It."

The Wise Dame's Scheme

Thereupon she went to her Husband and this addressed him: "I feel," she said, "that it is our Sacred Duty to give our Daughter all the Broadening Influence of Foreign Travel and Education, and that I ought to make the Sacrifice of buying my Paris Gowns in France instead of on Tremont street.

"Wherefore I will take our Daughter and go Abroad, and while I am Conscientiously Opposed to Husband Hunting as a Rule, it may chance that I may run across a Coat of Arms that will be just as good as New if Regilded."

Knowing the Duty of an American Husband and Father, the Man consented, and so the Lady took her Daughter and hiked across the Herring Pond, where the Girl acquired a Foreign Accent and was taught to be Ashamed of Father because he was in Trade.

Mother trailed her Purse like an Ames Sword Rug all across Europe, and it was not long before a Pack of Hungry Foreign Hunters was on her Trail, but she was Wise to the Game and led them a Chase, while she looked for the Right One who would be worth the Price. She did not Propose to Invest her good Dollars in a Measly Title, or a Shoddy Thing Made in Germany, and that had not been O' K'd by the Almanach de Gotha.

At last the Real Thing appeared on the Scene. He was Guaranteed as a Genuine Antique in the Aristocracy Line, for the Family Tree and his Ancestral Estate was the Fifth Mortgage.

The cool Calmness with which he ran up Bills that he never Intended to Pay was as Good as an Affidavit of Nobility, while his Blase Air in spending Off Credit ors betrayed how long his Family had been Familiar with the Business. He also possessed a Hyphenated Name that was so long that it had so be Handled on a Hook and Ladder Truck, and only used in Sections.

Charmed by Real Thing.

The Mother was enchanted. "I opine," she said to her Daughter, "that a Name like that will be a Jimmy with which you can break into any American Society, and that as a Parlor Ornament the Count will be a Bargain at Four Figures."

"But," objected the Daughter, "I do not care for him. He has weak Eyes, and a Lisp, and he makes me Tired, and I should like to have a Regular Man for a Husband."

"Foolish One," cried the Mother, "any Husband is liable to make you Weary, but if you marry the Count you will always have the Consolation of being able to Contemplate your Visiting Cards and the Crest on your Stationery with pleasure."

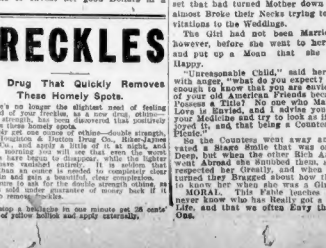
So the Girl was Married to the Count in great Splendor, and all the Exclusive set that had turned Mother down so hard almost Broke their Necks trying to get Invitations to the Weddings.

The Girl had not been Married long, however, before she went to her Mother and put up a Moan that she was not Happy.

"Unreasonable Child," said her Mother with anger, "what do you expect? Is it not enough to know that you are envied by all of your old American Friends because you Possess a Title? No one who Marries for Love is Envied, and I advise you to take your Medicine and try to look as if you enjoyed it, and that being a Countess was a Picnic."

So the Countess went away and Cultivated a Stage Smile that was only Skin Deep, but when the other Rich Americans went Abroad she Smirked them, and they respected her Greatly, and when they returned they Bragged about how they used to know her when she was a Girl.

MORAL. This Fable teaches that we never know who has Really got a Cinch in Life, and that we often Envy the wrong One.



Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

Pa had a lot of fun last nite with two college boys that calm up to the house to call on Ma's niece, that is here from Omaha. She is one of the nittiest gurls, except Ma, that I ever seen. The two college boys thought so, too.

Pa called me out into the library after the college boys had been there a few minuits, & he sed I seen, son, I am about to indulge in a little merriment & I want you to work with me. Look at this hand, sed Pa, & Pa showed me his hand ware the nuckels was remived from gitting plached purring a cake of ice in the ice box. This is the idee, sed Pa. You just heard them two boys talking about being amateur champeens at the boxing game. Now just go out there & start off by asking me why I bit poor Tom Sharkey in the eye last evening. I will answer accordingly, sed Pa, & the rest of it I will leave to youre wunderful little brane, sed Pa.

So we went back in the other room & after the college boys had talked sum more about boxing, I sed to them, O, you shud see my father box. Pa, I sed, what was the trubbel with you & Mister Sharkey last nite.

Nothing worth speeking about, sed Pa, dont talk about it.

But you bit him on the eye & knocked him out into the middel of the street, I sed. I dont thing you ought to have done it, be is shorter than you.

Keep still, Bobbie, sed Pa. Pa pretended for to be embarrassed & Ma looked awful mad.

So it has come to this, sed Ma, that you have to fight a ex-pugilist. Why didnt you tell me about it?

Pa asked me not to tell, I sed to Ma. He tould me after he hit Mister Sharkey that he was horrifly ashamed of striking a smaller man, & I am sorry I sed it. He had to lick the manager of the place after he licked Mister Sharkey, I sed.

Then the two college boys looked at Pa as if he was George Washington & General Grant rolled to-gether, & after thirt ons of them and Let us stop talking about fitcing & play the mandolin. I know a dandy tune, he sed, it is called Over the Waves.

Oh, let's not hear it yet, sed Ma's niece, I want to hear uncle talk a little more about how he beat a regular prize fiter, it must be grand to have such strength & skill, she sed to Pa. How did you get it?

It just came natural, I guess, sed Pa. My father was a very strong man before me, Pa sed. He lifted a horse ones out West.

I heard about that, sed Ma, & the cowboys and have lifted him only for the sheriff's bravery. Now I want you to tell me the truth of this battle between you & this Sharkey. Come, speak up.

I will, sed Pa, after the boys' have played Over the Waves. That was one of Sharkey's favorite tunes, by the way, sed Pa, ons he was a sailor.

The boys played Over the Waves on the mandolin & they sang sum college songs but all the time they was looking at Pa in a kind of scared. I guess they wont talk any more about how good they can box.

But I guess Pa will be kind of sorry if he goes near Mr. Sharkey after Mister Sharkey reads this.

THE CHILD STATISTICIAN REPORTS

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

CHAUNCEY DEVERE APPLETON, the Child Statistician, got up to address three Children's Congress.

"The question," he said, looking at his watch to give his hearers the intimation that his time is valuable, a brief and to the point, "for discussion today is one that often perplexes the Child Mind.

"It is this: Why are one child's parents wealthy, and another child's parents poor?

"In my modest capacity as Statistician for the Children's Congress, I can only report on that question so far as it personally concerns me.

"I find," swelling up as all men swell when they make a similar statement, "that the women are to blame."

Here there was other fifts swelled-up men in blouses and knickerbockers.)

"I have figured that my father spends four hours a week waiting for my mother to get ready to go to places with him, and seventeen hours a week waiting for his meals. This, in the average active life of fifty years, would amount to nine years, six months, fifteen days, four hours and thirty-seven minutes.

"In that length of time my father might have laid the foundation for an immense fortune. I say 'might'; I should have said 'would.'

"I do not take into account the amount of energy he wasted, or the loss of time in recovering his temper after my mother and finally got her hat on her head or the meal on the table. Such energy, I am sure, would have sufficed to dig the Panama Canal."

There was applause that was deafening, followed by discussions on the subject. It was decided to appoint a committee to wait on Congress.

Other decisions were that Presidents are not made of that kind of boys who get what they want out of mother by threatening to leave home;

That if all the Don'ts Mother uses in a year were made into charmstring they would make a long wait for Santa and enough left for garters;

That dresses made by mothers and never carried into execution would make a mountain range;

That the greatest reform the children need these days cannot be realized by the appointment of a committee of children, wives and spinsters to investigate the Child Mind, or to study The Child Temperamental;

But that it can be attained by a decree of fashion!

A fashion that will restore the pocket to Mother's skirt!

They Want Mother, when she goes to a party, to have a pocket in her skirt so that She can slip some of the cakes and candy into it and bring them home to her children.

Our grandmothers had these pockets," the Children's Congress declared. "And they understood the Child Heart better than these childless women understand it to-day."

The Wars of the Insects — By Garrett P. Serviss

HOW SCIENCE IS DIRECTING THEM FOR THE BENEFIT OF MAN

THERE is now going on in this country, under the direction of Dr. L. O. Howard, chief of the Bureau of Entomology, and his assistants, a warfare in comparison with whose destructiveness the irruptions of the barbarians in the Roman Empire sink into insignificance. The victims of these insect wars, waged to protect forests, gardens, orchards and grain fields, are numbered by billions, and the hosts that march to the conflict make the wild armies that followed Alaric and Attila seem contemptible by contrast of numbers.

The idea of training the armies of useful insects to attack those that are injurious to man's interests is not altogether new; it was put into practice on a small scale in France in 1840, but it is only since 1880 that it has been largely developed in this country, and since 1905 it has assumed an importance not previously imagined, through the systematic cultivation of the friendly insects. A kind of training camp, a great military insect station, has been established at Melrose Highlands, Mass., where the little warriors are bred and liberated to attack their foes—a work in which they need no urging.

Romantic Interest

A degree of romantic interest that no uninformed person would dream of is attached to the work of assembling the forces employed in these insect wars. Entomologists are sent all over the world in search of the insects that are needed, and which are known to be the foes of those against which the warfare is directed. Europe, Africa, Asia and the islands of the eastern seas are ransacked by the seekers. There is something ingeniously suggestive in the fact that on the old battlefield of Wagram the agents sent out by the American government found a colony of parasitic insects victoriously attacking the caterpillars of the formidable gipsy moth, which has wrought such destruction in this country, and they were immediately exported to Massachusetts to exercise their Napoleonic energy on a new field of battle.

Wherever they find the insects needed the searchers box them up and send them by mail or freight to this country. Some of them are adult insects, and they are carefully fed during the journey. Among these is a handsome beetle called the Calosoma, of a shining bronze color. They are usually sent in packages of safety-match boxes, one beetle in each box, with a wisp of sphagnum for it to feed on. Sometimes one or two caterpillars are put into the box to serve as food. Occasionally the beetles have been sent, especially from Spain, in cold storage, for the cold simply stagnates without killing them. To see one of these beetles attack a caterpiller of the gipsy moth is a cheering sight for the raisers who are trying to save the trees that these moths destroy by thousands. In their native countries they have already put their enemies under their feet.

A Precarious Period

One of the most interesting chapters in the history of this war of races is that concerning the battles with the terrible San Jose scale insect in California. The orange and lemon groves of the Pacific slope were threatened with destruction through the ravages of this scourge, when a remarkable insect of the lady-bird family (Coccinella), called the Novius Cardinalis, was imported from Australia. At the moment the lady-bird larvae were liberated in California they attacked the first scale insects they met, and the orchard in which they were let out was freed from the enemy in short order. Within less than a year after their arrival the lady-birds had won so complete a victory that Professor Riley was able to report that the scale insect was "practically no longer a factor to be considered in the cultivation of oranges and lemons in California." Everybody has seen lady-birds of some species. They are little, round, shining-backed creatures, marked with dots and often beautifully colored, and all of them are enemies to noxious insects of one kind or another, so that they should never be destroyed.

Later on, when the orange and lemon trees in Portugal were threatened with destruction by scale insects that had found their way to the continent from the Azores, Australian lady-birds from California, were sent to Portugal. Out of a shipment of sixty only five remained alive. But they were good fighters. A larger shipment was subsequently sent, and the little warriors were scattered among the gardens and orchards of Portugal. They marched to victory as triumphantly as they had done in California, and now Portugal is practically free from the pest.

In this country at present, the war of the insects is directed mainly against the gipsy and brown-tail moths. Among the enemies of these moths are various species of beetles, bugs and flies. Many of these are cultivated from the eggs that they lay in the bodies of their enemies.

Preparing for Battle

Many devices have been resorted to in order to preserve the useful species while destroying the noxious ones. Those who are interested in these details will find much information in Bulletin No. 91 of the Bureau of Entomology. The handling of the caterpillars containing the ichneumoned parasites is sometimes a disagreeable if not dangerous affair. The poisonous microscopic hairs and spines from the brown-tail moth larvae get into the eyes, the nostrils and the throat, and cause inflammation of the skin. To protect themselves the handlers wear goggles and coverings for the face and hands. Miss Ruhl of Zurich, who handles many packages to be sent to the United States, has invented for herself a complete costume of finely woven cloth, capped with a large helmet, which is furnished in front with a sheet of transparent celluloid.

When all is ready a field of strife is prepared by the men in charge. A large cage, covered with wire gauze, is placed over a moth-infested tree. The warlike fly parasites are confined in the cage, and they are not long in making their attack by depositing their eggs in the larvae of the moths. The insects developed from these eggs become the rank and file of a larger army which may be sent upon a campaign in the open. But experience has shown that smaller cages, of various forms, are more effective in the work of breeding and training an insect army.

Curiously enough, it has been found that some of the parasites attacking the moths, particularly the flies called Tachinids, are themselves attacked by secondary parasites, which thus serve as allies of the enemy. One of the problems with which it is necessary to deal is that of guarding against or getting rid of these secondary parasites.

But many other noxious insects beside the moths named have moral enemies which are now known, and the cultivation of these and their formation into armies of rescue are receiving attention. The elm leaf beetle, the plant tick and notherry scale insect, the various weevils and the plant lice and grain aphids all have their insect foes, which can be let loose upon them. Recently a species of large bembecid wasp has been sent from New Orleans to Algeria to wage war upon a kind of fly which imparts the "sleeping sickness" to dromedaries. The wasps went over in refrigerated cocoons, from which full-fledged insects were developed in Algeria, but their subsequent history is not yet known.

Considering what has been accomplished, one might be tempted to hope that an insect foe of mosquitoes and house flies may yet be discovered and sent out on a species of warfare to which the most tender-hearted sentimentalist could hardly object.

Effective Home Remedy for Tuberculosis

It is a serious matter when the lungs are affected. A trip away or to a sanatorium is expensive, and involves separation from home. Some are benefited, but none can safely return. Eckman's Alterative is effective—no leaving home necessary. For example:

231 S. Atlantic Ave., Haddonfield, N. J.

"Gentlemen: In the Fall of 1905 I contracted a very severe cold, which settled on my lungs, and my physician told me I must go to California immediately. At this time I was advised to take Eckman's Alterative. I stayed at home and commenced taking it the last week in October. I began to improve, and the first week in January, 1906, I resumed my regular occupation, being fully restored to health. It is now five years since my cure has been effected, and I cannot praise Eckman's Alterative too highly."

Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles, and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain poisonous or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all druggists, large stores, Houghton & Dutton Drug Store, and other leading druggists. Ask for booklet telling of recoveries and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

To Hide His Ignorance

THE menu of a certain restaurant is a thing of wonder to strangers. It contains several pages of various dishes, all classified, mostly with weird French names.

The country visitor eyed it up and down, but could make nothing of it. And the waiter stood silently by his side.

At last, in despair, the diner dabbed his finger in the middle of one page and said:

"Bring me some o' that."

"Oui, m'sieu," replied the waiter. "That was mayonnaise dressing, sar."

"I know that, my man,' snorted the countryman. "I can read!"

"But, m'sieu," said the waiter, apologetically, "what will you have it on?"

The diner glared.

"On a plate, of course, you idiot!" he roared. "Do you feed your guests in troughs at this restaurant?"

Hard Luck

IT was a cold Winter night, and the wind was howling around the trees. The weary wayfarer was wandering along without a home, and not much caring where he was. He had lost his way for hours.

Stop! What is that! A signpost for certain!

The weary wayfarer fumbled in his pocket, and brought out his box of matches. Luckily there was one left.

Carefully and slowly he toiled up the signpost, and at the top struck the match to see what was written thereon. The flickering glare of the match showed these words: "Try Poot's Pills."

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

Copyright, 1905, by Edward J. Clode.

THIS method, in fact, when combined with a careful system, is the only one whereby even a rich individual can indulge in a costly pastime and at the same time escape speedy ruin. With a fair snare of luck it may be made to pay; with continuous bad fortune the loss is spread over such a period that common sense has some opportunity to rescue the victim before it is too late.

Claude took up a position from which he could note the actions of the stranger in whom he was so interested. At first Mensmore staked nothing. He placed a small pile of gold in front of him; he seemed to listen expectantly to the croupier's monotonous cry, "Vingt-sept, rouge, impair, passe," or "Dix-huit, noir, pair, manque," and so on, while the little ivory ball whirred around the disc, and the long rakes, with unerring skill, drew in or pushed forward the sums lost or won.

The dominant expression of Mensmore's face as he sat and listened was one of disappointment. Something for which he waited did not happen. At last, with a tightening of his lips and a gathering sternness in his eyes, he placed five louis on the red, the number previously called being thirteen.

Black won.

For the next three attempts, each time with a five louis stake on the board, Mensmore backed the red, but still black won.

Next to him, an Italian, betting in notes of a thousand francs each, had quadrupled his first bet by backing the black.

Both Stop Playing

Both men rose simultaneously, the Italian grinning delightedly at a smart Parisienne, who joyously nodded her congratulations, the Englishman, quiet, utterly unmoved, but slightly pallid.

He passed out into the foyer and stopped to light a cigarette. Bruce noticed that his hand was steady, and that all the air of excitement had gone.

There were ill signs. There is no man so calm as he who has deliberately resolved to take his own life. That Mensmore was ruined, that he was hopelessly in love with a woman whom he could not marry, and that he was about to commit suicide, Bruce was as certain as though the facts had been proved by a coroner.

But the thing should not happen if he could prevent it.

The band was playing one of Waldenfel's waltzes. Mensmore listened to the fascinating melody for a moment. He hesitated at the door of the writing room, but he went out, puffing furiously at his cigarette. A guard looked at him as he turned to the right of the entrance, and made for the shaded terraces overlooking the sea.

"A silent Englishman," thought the man; and he caught sight of Bruce, also smoking, preoccupied and solitary.

"Another silent Englishman. Mon Dieu! What miserable lives these English lead!"

And so the two vanished into the blackness of the foliage, while within the brilliantly lighted building the free-fire of silk mingled with soft laughter and the sweet straing of music.

If it be true that extremes meet, then this was a night for a tragedy.

Breaking the Bank

THERE were not many people in this part of the Casino gardens. A few love-making couples and a handful of others who preferred the chilly quietude of nature to the throng of the interior promenade, made up the occupants of the winding paths that cover the seaward slope.

At last Mensmore halted. There was no one in front, and he turned to look if the terrace were clear behind him. He caught sight of Bruce, but did not recognize him, and leaned against a low wall, ostensibly to gaze at the sea until the other had passed.

Claude came up to him and cried cheerily:

"Hello! Is that you, Mr. Mensmore? Isn't it a lovely night?"

Mensmore, startled at being thus unexpectedly addressed by name, wheeled about, stared at the newcomer, and said, very stiffly:

"Yes; but I felt rather seedy in the Casino, so I came here to be alone."

"Of course," answered the barrister, "You look a little out of sorts. Perhaps got a chill, eh? It is dangerous weather here, particularly on these heavenly evenings. Come back to the hotel and have a stiff brandy and soda. It will brace you up."

Mensmore flushed a little at this persistence.

Bruce Is Persistent

"I tell you," he growled, "that I only require to be left in peace, and I shall soon recover from my indisposition. I am awfully obliged to you, but"—

"But you wish me to walk on and mind my own business?"

"Not exactly that, old chap. Please don't think me rude. I am very sorry, but I can't talk much tonight."

"So I understand. That is why I think it is best for you to have company, even such disagreeable companionship as my own."

"Confound it, man," cried the other, now thoroughly irritated; "tell me what way you are going and I will take the other. Why on earth cannot you take a polite hint, and leave me to myself?"

"It is precisely because I am good at taking a hint that I positively refuse to leave you until you are safely landed at your hotel. Indeed, I may stick to you then for some hours."

"The devil take you! What do you mean?"

"Exactly what I say."

"If you don't quit this instant, I will punch your head for you."

"Ah! You are recovering already. But before you start active exercise take your overcoat off. That revolver in the breast pocket might go off accidentally, you know. Besides, as I shall hit back, I might fetch my knuckles against it, and that would be hardly fair. Otherwise, I can do as much in the punching line as you can, any day."

This reply utterly disconcerted Mensmore.

His Intention

"Look here," he said, avoiding Bruce's steadfast gaze, "what are you talking about? What has it got to do with you, anyhow?"

"Oh, a great deal. My business principally consists in looking after other people's affairs. Just now it is my definite intention to prevent you from blowing out your brains, or what passes for is a louis. Say nothing, but leave us."

"Monsieur understands that the honor of a French policeman"—

"I understand that if there is any report made of this affair to the authorities you will be dismissed for negligence. Had this lunatic been left to your care he would now have been lying here dead. Do you doubt me?"

The guard hesitated. "Monsieur m'excuse," he said, for Bruce's finger and thumb had returned the coin in his waistcoat pocket.

This transaction satisfactorily ended, Bruce accosted Mensmore, who was awkwardly twisting himself to see if his backbone were all right.

"You are not hurt, I hope?"

"It is matterless. Why could you not let me finish the business in my own way?"

"Because the world has some use for a man like you. Because you are a moral coward, and require support from a stronger nature. Because I did not want to think of that girl crying her eyes out tomorrow when she read of your death, or heard of it, as she assuredly would have done."

Mensmore, though still furious at his fellow-countryman's interference, was visibly amazed at this final reference.

"What do you know about her?" he cried.

"Nothing, save what my eyes tell me."

"They seem to tell you a remarkable lot about my affairs."

His Word

"Possibly. Meanwhile I want you to give me your word of honor that you will not make any further attempt on your life during the next seven days."

"The word of honor of a disgraced man! Will you accept it?"

"Most certainly."

"You are a queer chap, and no mistake. Very well, I give it. At the same time I cannot help dying of starvation. I lost my last cent tonight at roulette. I am hopelessly involved in debts which I cannot pay. I have no prospects and no friends. You are not doing me a kindness, my dear fellow, in keeping me alive, even for seven days."

"You might have obtained your fare to London from the authorities of the Casino."

"Hardly. I lost very little at roulette. I am not such a fool. My losses are nearly all in bets over the pigeon-shooting match when I ought to have won. I was backing myself at a game where I was apparently sure to succeed."

"Until you were beaten by a woman's voice."

"Yes, wizard. I am too dazed to wonder at you sufficiently. Yet I would have lost fifty times for her sake, though it was for her sake that I wanted to win."

"Come, let us smoke. Sit down, and tell me all about it."

They took the nearest seat, lighting cigarettes. The guard, watching them from the shade of a huge palm tree, murmured:

"Holy Virgin, what madmen are these English! They move apart, unknown; they fight; they fraternize; they consume tobacco—all within five minutes."

And he lovingly felt for the louis to assure himself that he was not dreaming.

"There is not much to tell," said Mensmore, who had quite recovered his self control, and was now trying to sum up the man who had so curiously entered his life at the moment when he had decided to do away with it. "I came here, being a poor chap living mostly on my wits, to go in for the pigeon shooting tournaments. I won several and was in fair funds. Then I fell in love. The girl is rich, well connected and all that sort of thing. She is the first good influence that has crossed my life, so I thought that perhaps my luck was now going to turn. I backed myself for all I was worth, and more, to win the championship. If it came off I should have won over £3,000. As it is, I owe £900, which must be paid on Monday. My total assets, after I settle my hotel bill and send a check to a chum who took some of my bets in his own name, was £16. Now I have nothing. So you see"—

"Yes," interrupted Bruce, "it is a hard case. But death is no settlement. Nobody gets paid, and everybody is worried."

"My dear fellow, my life is in your keeping for seven days. After that, I presume, I take myself in charge again."

The barrister took thought for a while before he inquired:

"Why did you go to the Casino tonight, if you did not patronise the tables as a rule?"

The other colored somewhat and laughed sarcastically.

"Just a final bit of folly. I dreamt that my luck had turned."

"Dreamt?"

"Yes, last night. Three times I imagine that I was playing roulette, and that after a certain number—whether thirteen or twenty-three I was uncertain—turned up, there was a run of seventeen on the red. The funny thing is that I had an impression that the number was twenty-three, but with a doubt that it might be thirteen. I remember, during a sub-conscious state in the third dream, resolving to listen and look more carefully to discover the exact number. But again things got blurred. The only clear point was that the run of seventeen on the red commenced at once."

Bruce's Plan

"Weird!"

"Well, I took my remaining cash, went to the Casino, became a bit impatient when neither number turned up for quite a while, and when thirteen appeared I backed the red. But four times it was the black that won."

"So I saw."

"Have you been keeping guard over me?"

"Yes, in a sort of way."

"You are a queer chap. I can't help saying that I am obliged to you. But it won't do any good. I am absolutely dead broke."

"Now listen to me. I will pay your fare back to London and give you something to live on until I return a week hence. Then you must come to see me, and I will help you into some sort of situation. But you must once and for all abandon this notion of suicide."

"What about my debts?"

"Confound your debts. Tell people to wait until you are able to pay them."

"And—and the girl?"

"If she is worth having she will give you a chance of making a living sufficient to enable you to marry her. She is of age, I suppose, and can marry any one she likes."

Mensmore pulled his cigarette in silence for fully a minute. Then he said:

"You are a very decent sort, Mr. ——"

"Bruce—Claude Bruce is my name."

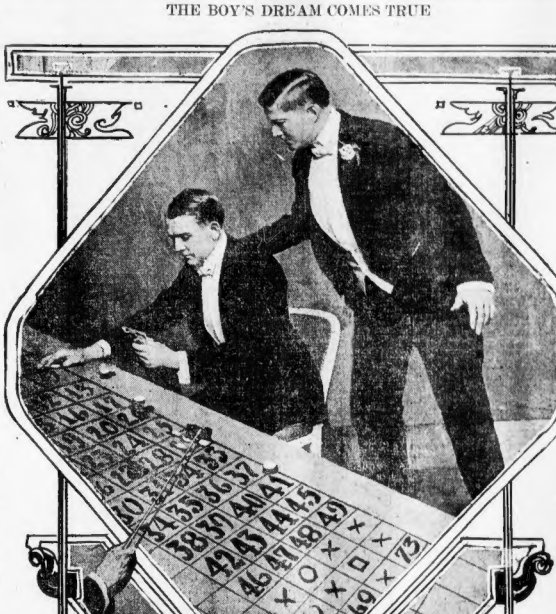
THE BOY'S DREAM COMES TRUE



Mensmore staked his ten louis on the red. They became twenty and then forty.

German Naval Princes Admire Our Women

Officers of Visiting Fleet, Now in New York, Express Enthusiastic Admiration.

By VIOLA RODGERS.

NEW YORK, June 10.—With two German princes and a rear-admiral and captains and other officers galore, the next three days are going to be a round of gayety which will bring many of the society folks down in their yachts to the North River and from their nearby country places to welcome the German squadron. The officers of the fleet are charmed by the beauty of the American women.

Rear-Admiral von Heimt Paschwitz when asked his opinion of American society as he has seen it thus far said:

"Beautiful women cannot but be the outcome of beautiful characters—of facts, of charm, of goodness, and these three things always make the ideal hostess. I have found your hostesses beautiful in every sense of the word," he added gallantly.

"And what of the young women—the unmarried ones?" he was asked.

"Let Prince Christian and Prince Henry of Reuss answer that," he added slyly.

Prince Henry, who is on board the Stein, believes that the American girl is the prettiest girl in the world.

"No nation can beat her—she is superb. I am having such a jolly time and have enjoyed the American girls so much. They are so pretty, so full of spirit, so naturalish! they are perfect!"

"I cannot say too much for the charm of the American woman, young or otherwise, and I would like to ask, by the way, how one is to tell the one from the other. I have met a number of mothers with daughters, and it is difficult to know which is which."

The festivities came near being marred by a tragedy when a small sight-seeing launch on which there were nineteen men and women was swept against the steel-plated hull of the Moltke. Prince Henry, who is an officer on the dreadnought cruiser, directed the rescue work. The small craft came near being swamped before she was shoved from her perilous position.

When the German rear admiral called upon Mayor Gaynor at City Hall, there was a cordial exchange of greetings.

PRINCE HENRY OF REUSS, AND MRS. VANDERBILT

Prince Henry is one of the officers of the German fleet, and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt is one of the society leaders who are entertaining the titled visitors during their New York sojourn.

HONOR CONFEDERATE DEAD AT WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The dead of the Southern Confederacy were honored at the Arlington Cemetery by memorial services at which Senator Hoke Smith and former Secretary of the Navy Herbert made addresses. OCEAN SERVICES FOR DEAD IN SUBMARINE

CHERBOURG, June 10.—As a further investigation only confirmed the impossibility of recovering the bodies of the crew of the submarine Vendemiaire, which was sunk off the Cherbourg peninsula, the minister of marine, M. Delcasse, went out to the scene of the disaster aboard the armored cruiser Gloire to pay homage to the dead.

DETECTIVE BURNS TO TAKE STAND IN TRIAL OF DARROW

LOS ANGELES, June 10.—Detective William J. Burns is in the city to testify for the prosecution in the trial of Clarence S. Darrow, charged with jury bribing, which was resumed today.

Burns declined to discuss the nature of the testimony he expected to give, but it is thought it will consist of evidence concerning the alleged attempts by the McNamara defense to corrupt witnesses who had been summoned to testify for the prosecution in that case.

Stock Markets Firm at Start; Trading Limited

By W. H. ROSS.

W. H. ROSS

STATE STREET, June 10.—Midday—The Boston market was firm at the start but rather quiet. It held a steady tone during the morning. Among coppers to sell higher were Hancock, North Butte, Isle Royale, Adventure, Allouez, Butte and Superior and Quincy. Those to decline included Copper Range, Utah Copper and Boston and Corbin.

Outside of the copper list, Island Creek went up 1⅝ and Fond Creek ⅜.

The government crop report to be issued today will be the first one of its kind on Spring wheat and oats.

Anthracite Road Issues Higher.

Expectation that the United States Supreme Court may today hand down a decision on the Reading or hard coal trust combine case, did not prevent Reading and Lehigh Valley from advancing at the opening of the New York market. Reading went ¾ and Lehigh Valley 1¼ higher, stock of common was also in demand. It made an initial gain of ⅜, and then went still higher. Union Pacific advanced a point within a few minutes, and it is said that most of the buying was by board room traders who expect confirmation of accumulations buying of American sugar.

The Curb was steady.

In London American issues were hesitant, but comparatively firm. Selling of Canadian Pacific on Berlin account was continued. The monetary situation in the German capital continues strained. Prices were more generally ruled by London as to the probabilities of the Supreme Court settling the Reading case today.

Pacific issues opened at the opening and copper sold off. Oil, rails and future were unchanged. The copper market there was fairly steady.

Steel Corporation a Monopoly.

It is stated on high authority in Washington that the stanley congressional committee will rebut that E. Herbert Morgan is the arch enemy of the Sherman anti-trust law and independents, and that he and his associates made $630,000,000 result in organizing the Steel Corporation. It is said that the committee will report in favor of the Sherman anti-trust law and that it will be found also that a body of facts which define the United state Supreme Court decision in regard to the Northern Securities case. Chairman Stanley said: "Mr. Morgan led the country to escape attendance before the committee, but I am not without hope we may be able to summon him."

Concerning the report of the committee, which is likely to be filed with Congress within ten days, it is said:

The monumental Federal steel corporation and registration of all industrial corporations doing an interstate business with the right of Federal inspection such as is now exercised over Federal banks. It will recommend that the States be given the right to control the tax to be levied on corporations and the character of their securities.

"It will ask for legislation prohibiting national banks from participating in the organization of industrial combinations, and it will probably recommend legislation preventing directors of banks from becoming directors of railroads.

"It will also suggest legislation prohibiting in the future the acquisition by any individual or corporation of more than a certain per cent. of the stock of any railroad or public service corporation, that may lead to a monopoly within the definition of the law."

Standard's Fight Abroad.

D. Koning, financial correspondent for Hearst newspapers in Amsterdam, says that the Standard Oil is still at work to execute its plan of getting a world monopoly and that it is now fighting in Holland to obtain control of the markets of the Far East now held by the Royal Dutch Petroleum Company. It said:

"Just now the Standard Oil Company is undertaking a campaign against the Royal Dutch Shell combine. The Dutch subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company, the American Petroleum Company, has taken a large and apparently controlling interest in a new concern, the Nederlandsche Petroleum Maatschappy, which will build refineries at Ymuiden, near Amsterdam, and Delfzyl, near Rotterdam. Both of these are in the Dutch Company has geographical advantages which up to the present have been its position unassailable."

Resumption of dividends on Seaboard Air Line preferred stock at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum is not expected until late in 1912 or early next year. Directors of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company will meet on July 30 for dividend action, and it is thought that high price of the metal will result in the stock being put on a 4 per cent. basis.

It is believed by steel manufacturers that the demand for their products will be sustained at approximately the present ratio for at least a year.

Charles W. Morse, the financier, pardoned a few months ago from a long term in the Federal prison at Atlanta, says that the New York Central Railroad a dangerous power and function it was never intended it should have.

Copper shares have been one of the strong features on the Paris Bourse of late, and the reason for this is thought to be the strong statistical position of the metal.

Thompson, Towle & Co. say: "On the present production of 9,000,000 tons per annum the Steel Corporation will earn $10 per share. Should the Steel Corporation increase its capacity it should be able to show net earnings of $7 per share, and every one cent advance in the price of copper will affect earnings $1 per share."

TWO KILLED BY AUTO FROM BOSTON

FITCHBURG, June 10.—P. Max Thurlow, twenty-four, of Brookline, and Wilham F. Holske, thirty, Boston business men, were arraigned in court today, charged with causing the death of Andrew Leonard, fifty-five, and Joseph Frank Duquette, forty-five, by running them down in an automobile. The two men were held in $2,000 bail for a hearing June 18.

James C. Evans, who was with the party, was charged with drunkenness. He held under $500 bail.

Thurlow and Holske, who are partners, in their big touring car were speeding toward Dalton when the machine struck three laborers, Andrew Leonard, Joseph Frank Duquette and John Callahan.

Leonard was tossed ten feet into a ditch beside the road, and Duquette was hurled twenty feet into the centre of the road. Callahan was struck a glancing blow and tossed to the side of the road.

EXPLOSION PROBABLY FATAL TO WOMAN

Mrs. Mary Anderson is in a precarious condition today, the result of being badly burned by the explosion of a kerosene stove at her home, No. 34 Woodbury street, Roxbury. Her husband, Harry Anderson, attempted to rescue her, but was unable to extinguish the flames before they had burned the woman about the face, hands and breast. The fire department arrived in time to keep the damage down to $5. Mrs. Anderson is at the City Hospital and probably will die.

BOYS HIT BY AUTO; ONE MAY NOT LIVE

An automobile owned and driven by B. J. Farley of No. 5 Bennington street, East Boston, yesterday forenoon struck and knocked down Joseph Gallner, aged five, of No. 247 Bennington street and Teddy Reeves, the same age, of No. 228 Bennington street. The Gallagher boy is on the dangerous list at the East Boston Relief Station. Reeves, who sustained a deep wound, was able to go home in the afternoon. Mr. Farley took both boys to the hospital in the automobile.

PRINCESS WORD NOW IS ACTIVITY

By THE PRINCESS EDITOR.

Activity—that's the word!

And it will be the watchword from now until the last vote coupon is printed in the Princess Contest.

Indifference, lassitude, "really-don't-care" spirit, is an unknown quantity to the possessors of the good things in this old world of ours.

Activity, energy, enthusiasm, "hustle"—these are typical of the prize-winning Americans of today.

Yesterday's vote list preached a whole sermon on "activity." Candidates just entering the race have proven beyond question that the prizes in the Princess Contest are not positively within the grasp of any candidate—and won't be until the last gun is fired.

A recent interesting entrant was Miss Florence Devine.

Look over the prize list just once more!

Can you find there a good reason for the display of a little energy on your part?

Indeed you can, girls! Three hundred good reasons.

All votes for next Sunday's list must be in by next Friday at 11 a. m. You all know what this means. It means instant action!

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC!

11 P. M., June 9, 1912

The Boston Elevated Railway Company believes it to be its duty to inform the public of certain facts.

It has always dealt directly with its employees.

It has constantly borne in mind the importance of proper treatment of its employees.

It has done everything within its power to improve the conditions and personal comfort of its employees.

It has paid good and constantly increasing wages, pensions and rewards to its employees.

It has assisted financially and otherwise organizations of its employees.

It has had no dissatisfaction or grievance or trouble of any sort between itself and its men.

It has conferred repeatedly and is now in daily conference with a voluntary organization made up of the great majority of its employees.

It has never declined to confer with any of its employees as such.

It does not recognize the necessity of any interference whatsoever with the loyal, cordial and generous relations which have existed in the past, exist in the present, and must exist in the future between its employees and itself.

It believes it to be its duty to support the large majority of its men who are loyal to the company and the community, and who desire to be let alone in the faithful and peaceful performance of their duty.

For Friday and Saturday the company operated nearly its entire schedule from morn till dark.

It was prepared on Friday night to operate its night service and endeavored so to do until riotous and violent acts prevented the safe transportation of passengers.

On Saturday night, due to threats of a repetition of Friday night's acts, it discontinued service on such portions of its lines as could not be operated with due safety to passengers, employees and property.

During the day, Sunday, June 9th, it operated nearly its full service from early morning until dark.

On Sunday evening we operated on full schedule our rapid transit system, including the elevated from Sullivan square to Forest Hills; Atlantic avenue; Washington street tunnel; East Boston tunnel; Tremont street subway, and the Cambridge subway; and also ran twenty-one (21) lines connecting therewith, furnishing service to substantially all parts of our entire system.

WE ARE HERE TO RENDER A PUBLIC SERVICE.

WE ARE HERE TO RENDER A SAFE SERVICE.

WE HAVE ALWAYS ENDEAVORED TO RENDER THE BEST SERVICE.

WE ARE PREPARED TO CONTINUE TO DO SO, ASKING ONLY FOR THAT PROTECTION WHICH THE PUBLIC AUTHORITIES HAVE ASSURED US THEY ARE ABLE AND WILLING TO GIVE.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Although there has been a generous response to the call made by the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association for cars for the outing for blind and crippled children tomorrow, yet many cars are needed to take the 2,000 tots to Sharon.

Plans are being made to make this outing even greater than last year. Not only are cars necessary, but the expense of providing lunches for this large army of children is by no means small. Of course the first requisite is motor-cars. If you have a motor car loan it to the orphans for one day in the year. If you have no car or yours is in commission on that particular day, then the committee will be grateful to receive a slight money donation.

All donations for cars or other help in this worthy cause should be mailed to Chester I. Campbell, Secretary Boston Automobile Dealers' Association, Inc., under whose direction the event will be held.

On April 22 the Thomas Company put into commission as a Technical Service car the old "Round the World Car" that won the famous New York to Paris Race in 1908. From now on the veteran will be used exclusively to carry the factory technical service experts from one end of the country to the other.

Neil Nobr and Elmer Miller, two specially-trained technical service men, have undertaken the biggest job ever projected by an automobile manufacturer. Their duties are to call on all Thomas owners and to co-operate with Thomas dealers in inspecting Thomas cars and making needed adjustments. Thomas owners will be shown how to get the greatest efficiency from their cars and the gospel of Thomas Technical Service practiced as well as preached by the parent company.

The Thomas Technical Service car is now working east from Buffalo. So far nearly one hundred Thomas owners have been visited. During the Summer the New England States will be thoroughly covered and the car will then work back west through New York and Pennsylvania.

Interesting bits of gossip on matters that interest motor car users float over to this country from Europe occasionally. One of these has just come to the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company at Buffalo and has to do with the enmity the people of some parts of Switzerland have for the motorist. Poetic justice has just been handed out to the Canton of Graubunden for the antagonistic stand it has taken in the past.

The Canton is taking up a loan of 9,000,000 francs at four per cent., but for the first time in Swiss financial history not even half of the amount has been applied for. This unparalleled reluctance on the part of the capitalists, who almost without exception are motor car owners, is traced back to Graubunden's anti-motoring attitude. They refuse to support a Canton as implacable in its ideas as Graubunden has, times without number, proved itself to be.

Champ Clark the Logical Democratic Candidate

The claim has been advanced in certain interested quarters that Champ Clark, if nominated, could not carry New York or other Eastern States, and that some other Democratic candidate could do so.

Nothing could be more illogical and untrue.

Upon what foundation may this assumption rest?

It is a matter of simple fact that Champ Clark has carried every Eastern State in which his candidacy has been definitely presented by the same kind of majorities in which he swept his Central States and the West.

Massachusetts is fully as representative an Eastern State as New York. So is Rhode Island. The same ideas, the same sentiments and the same conditions prevail in these States as in New York.

But Champ Clark, without stirring from his post of duty in Washington, carried Massachusetts by a two to one majority over the brilliant public speaking of Governor Wilson and his friends. He carried Maryland, which is also by environment distinctly an Eastern State, by a two to one majority over both Governor Wilson and Governor Harmon in opposition. He carried Rhode Island and New Hampshire, distinctly Eastern States.

Mr. Clark refused to antagonize Governor Wilson in his own State of New Jersey, although urged to do so; nor did he antagonize Governor Baldwin in Connecticut, nor compete for the vote of Pennsylvania.

What reason has any man to think or say that Champ Clark could not have carried New York in a fair, definite primary? He is exactly the type of rugged, manly, straightforward Democrat that would appeal to the Democrats of that State. He has long been a favorite and an applauded orator at Tammany's Fourth of July celebrations, and his magnificent personal appearance and record would appeal powerfully to the rank and file of the New York and New Jersey Democrats—as they have appealed irresistibly to Massachusetts and Maryland and Rhode Island and New Hampshire.

Every logical deduction from conditions justifies the belief that Champ Clark could come nearer to carrying New York than any Democratic candidate outside of New York.

Then take the record of the Speaker in the rest of the country. Illinois is one of the great debatable States, normally Democratic, but always doubtful. Champ Clark carried Illinois by a majority of three to one against the persuasive eloquence of Governor Wilson! What States more antithetically representative of the American Republic than Massachusetts and Illinois? Champ Clark swept both of them by overwhelming majorities against Governor Wilson, who is exploited in one newspaper as being a more available man, although he has been overwhelmingly defeated by Clark wherever they have been definitely opposed.

Missouri is a doubtful State, now Republican, and Champ Clark is the one Democrat who would be certain to carry it.

Iowa and Kansas, the two great agricultural States of the Union, were swept by Clark overwhelmingly against Wilson and Harmon.

California is a doubtful State, and Clark carried it against Wilson in a wave which indicates the wide sweep of the Missouri statesman's hold upon the country.

Recall the fact that Clark has carried outright and solidly twenty-six States and four out of five Territories, when Wilson has carried solidly only five States.

How can the common sense of the Democratic country and of the Democratic delegates at Baltimore resist such overwhelming evidences of popular regard and popular confidence as Champ Clark has shown in the Presidential primaries?

Nothing short of prejudice or interest can fail to perceive that this is the man who, without factions surrounding him or charges against him or suspicions touching him, can unite all factions by his record and character, and carry all the States in November that any living Democrat can carry.

And why should New York, in which the people are strong, resolute and wide awake to the appeals of a sound and yet progressive Democracy, be regarded as too dull or too unprogressive to fall in line with the Democrats of these other great States and follow this great, loyal, rugged Democrat of Missouri to the polls in November?

Mr. Taft's Appeal to Women

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

The first appeal ever made by a candidate for the Presidency for the votes of the women of the country was made by Mr. Taft.

This was an appeal addressed to the women Republicans of California for support at the primaries.

The President told of the things he had done that should persuade women to vote for him, and mentioned especially his work in behalf of children.

He did NOT, however, explain why it was that he appointed to the bench Mr. Julius Mayer, that distinguished advocate of child labor and enemy of children.

When Mr. Taft put Mr. Mayer on the bench, he knew—for the facts were before him—that he was appointing a man most useful to those that exploit the labor of children.

Mr. Taft should not ask or expect the vote of any woman after appointing to the bench a man who feels that it is right to take the children that women bring into the world, grind them up for profit, and turn their delicate bodies, their strength now and their chance or success and health hereafter into dividends.

Appointing such a man as Julius Mayer to the bench, or to any other public office where he can influence public affairs, and talking about the welfare of children, is like advocating Christianity and breaking the Ten Commandments at once—it is inconsistent.

The Working Man and His Money

Save, Save, Save. The Future Will Care for Itself

By THOMAS TAPPER

(The following article is printed by permission from Mr. Thomas Tapper's book just published by the Platt & Peck Co., New York, and copyrighted by them, entitled "Youth and Opportunity.")

By THOMAS TAPPER

LET us keep before us the average workingman and his money, and let us ask what his money means, what its power is, and how it may serve him now and in the future, for every man, who earns little or much, looks upon money almost haughtily as the one resource of safety. He wants the use of it now, and the comfort of it in the future. Most people get the one—the use of it in the present—but not the other, the future protection of it. Can a man have both?

It is a comforting fact that he can. But in order that a workingman, of any station, may have this two-fold use of money he must begin the study of two things:

1. Of the money he earns.
2. Of the time he possesses.

From these he must get the two-fold satisfaction he seeks—present comfort and future insurance.

Assuming that he gives the very best there is in him for the money he receives, it becomes clear that money is only another form of the best there is in him. He thinks and works, is faithful to his task, and at the end of the week the pay envelope GIVES HIM THESE QUALITIES BACK AGAIN IN ANOTHER FORM. This money in a thing he can exchange readily for other things. But before he begins to exchange it he should pause a moment and say to himself:

This envelope contains all the effort of my health, strength and thought for a week. I may or may not be able to keep health, strength and thought up to the present pitch to the end of my life; hence this money should protect me and infuse now while I am efficient and guarantee me protection later, when I may possibly be less so.

Pursuing this line of reasoning, his first deduction will be this: Of all evils against himself that he commits the wasting of money is one of the most disastrous, for it is equivalent to wasting his own power of mind and body. The money he earns should serve him faithfully, and be in turn must be faithful to himself in the use of his money. Up to the present moment he has perhaps saved nothing. The rule of his life has been a variation of "easy come, easy go." But it has not put him forward. He is, in fact, a little older and a little nearer the time when his efficiency may be less than it is today.

If he can succeed in seeing himself in this light, he will begin to be a student of money. The first thing he must do is to study in order the following subjects:

1. Appropriation.
2. Equipment of himself as a worker.
3. The daily leisure he enjoys.

By appropriation is meant this: If he is a family man, certain fixed items of expense must be met regularly. He should sit down and make out an accurate list of these. He should study this list until he is positive that it is right, that it represents only those things that are necessary to himself and his family. One of three results will be before him. (1) The appropriation is beyond the amount he earns. (2) or it is equal to it, leaving no margin. (3) or it is below it and actually does leave him a margin.

If he finds that he is living beyond his income or even within it, his duty is to begin again and reapportion his expenses so as to leave a margin, for the future is only secure when a margin exists. It may be ever so small, but it positively must exist, or he is skating on ice so thin that he is in constant danger of breaking through and drowning himself and his loved ones.

There is required of him nothing less than actual courage, bravery of the highest kind, to give up things he has perhaps been accustomed to, and to establish the margin he must have; but if he is serious and manly he will do it. His position now is this: He earns a definite amount. Every time the contents of the pay envelope is distributed there is something left for the savings bank or for life insurance, or for both.

He has now put his financial affairs in order. It has occurred to him that anything a man cannot afford is really a waste, and waste is the most expensive of all habits. Extravagance is exceptionally expensive.

Five cents thrown away for a thing one does not need, is all the money a dollar can earn in twelve months, invested at 5 per cent. But five cents placed in the savings bank daily amounts in fifty years to nearly $5,000. A dollar bet on a game and lost cannot be earned as interest in one year on a sum less than $20. Small sums saved daily, even for so short a time as ten years, accumulate impressively. Ten cents saved daily for ten years amounts, at four per cent., to nearly $450. One dollar a week placed in a savings bank continually for fifty years, amounts to over eight thousand dollars.

These illustrations should give one faith in the power of a little money to reach considerable sums, IF IT IS CONSTANTLY SET ASIDE. John Wanamaker, who is said to have started life on a ten-dollar-a-week salary, says:

"The difference between the clerk who spends all of his salary and the clerk who saves part of it, is the difference, in ten years, between the owner of a business and the man out of a job."

And Andrew Carnegie, whose success in accumulating money is known to everybody, thus speaks of the lesson that the improvident man must suffer:

"The failure of the man who does not save his money is due not only to the fact that he has no money with which to take advantage of the opportunities that come in the way of every man, but also, and particularly, to the fact that such a man is not able or fit to avail himself of these opportunities. The man who cannot and does not save money, cannot and will not do anything else worth while."

The Ould Piper

By PAULINE FRANCES CAMP

I CONNED me the tale of the Piper Pied,
Wid a tear in the tail of me eye:
'Tis I do be glad there be none such now,
Says I to meself, says I,
For me fagot gleams on a wee bit lass,
An' a slip of a blue-eyed lad;
An' what would I do, were they toled away?
Says I to meself, bedad.

But one day I looked for me wee bit lass,
An' the slip of a lad, forbye;
'Twas naught could I find save a slim colleen,
Wid a blush an' a roguish eye;
An' near her, the likes of a bold gossoon,
Wid shoulders to match me own;
Oh, where are me childer, at all, at all?
Says I to meself, och hone!

Then I minded meself of the Piper ould;
Sure 'tis back he has come the day,
An' stolen me wee ones from off me hearth,
Wid his pipe an' his wheedlin' way.
Arrah, the thafe o' the surreld, he is;
'Tis alsy on walks an' sly,
'Twas listen, and follow, an' over the hills!
An' 'tis lonely the day am I!

Dorothy Dix Writes —OF— If Women Acted Like Taft and T.R. —AND— How Perplexing It Is to Be a Woman

By Dorothy Dix

THERE is one thing for which all suffragists should return thanks to Heaven, on their knees, and that is that neither President Taft nor ex-President Roosevelt is a woman.

Suppose two women who were candidates for the highest elective office in the gift of their sex—the presidency of the Federation of Women's Clubs, or the National Suffrage Association, say—who had once been bosom friends, were going about the country raking up each other's past, and vilifying and abusing each other like fishwives.

Suppose that the kindest epithet that they hurled at each other was Hussy! Cat! Liar! Ingrate! Fat Slob! and other compliments of the same kidney, wouldn't there be heard from one end of the country to the other that such conduct showed that women were unfit for self-government or to participate in government?

Wouldn't men declare that it proved how emotional, illogical and prejudiced women were, and how unable they were to bring the same calm, dispassionate consideration to bear on public questions that men did?

Yea, verily.

If two women who wanted the same honor and office should act as our two most exalted statesmen are now doing it would put the cause of suffrage for women back fifty years. "Look at the hysteria of the performance!" men would cry. "Consider the disloyalty and the treachery of them! Look at the wire pulling! Observe how brittle friendships are when they stand in the way of selfish ambition! Certainly, those who have no more self-control than is exhibited in this disgusting struggle for place and power have no right to the exercise of the franchise, and it will be a cold Fourth of July when we put the ballot in their hands!"

Lucky for Suffrage Cause That the Candidates Aren't Women

Yes, indeed, it certainly is lucky for suffragists that Mr. Taft and Mr. Roosevelt wear trousers instead of petticoats, because if two women had engaged in such a mud-slinging contest as the[illegible] had back-bitten each other as they have, we should have proved to everybody's satisfaction that we are too emotional to be trusted to handle a loaded weapon like the vote.

Of course there's no argument in the kettle reminding the pot that it is also black, but it is interesting and cynically amusing to note how different is the code of morals and manners, even in politics, by which men and women are judged. Nobody, for instance, is foolish enough to think that the unseemly wrangle between Mr. Taft and Mr. Roosevelt indicates that men are unfitted for self-government, or should be disfranchised, but if two women were to contend that way for an office it would be considered, and used, as a potent argument against giving women the right to vote.

When a man wants an office he goes after it tooth and nail, with a scalping knife in one hand and a money bag in the other, but when a woman wants an office she is lampooned and criticized if she doesn't do the "after you, my dear Alphonse," act.

Man Can Criticise Man, but Women Must Keep Still

Apparently when men do certain things politically they are right. When women do them they are wrong. Men who believed that they had a right to a voice in making the laws that ruin them have fought bloody battles to establish their rights, and the world has applauded them for it. But a shriek, that is echoed around the world, has gone up because some women, who thought that they had a right to a voice in making the laws that govern them, smashed a few windows. Heaven only knows what would happen if a woman should shed a drop of blood in her struggle for liberty.

Another curious and humorous illustration of the things that a man may do, and a woman may not do, is shown in the right that men have to judge a matter on its merits, while a woman is compelled to always lug in the eternal sex equation. For example, you often hear it said that woman's cruelty to woman makes countless thousands mourn, and that nobody is so hard on an erring woman as another woman.

In the first place, there isn't a word of truth in this assertion. Women are women's best friends, and there is no hand that is so steadily held out in helpfulness to the unfortunate of her sex as the woman's hand.

But that's not the point I want to make here. What I want to call attention to is that a man is accorded a perfect right to judge another man freely, and say so. If a man finds another man to be a liar and a thief and a hypocrite, nobody accuses him of being actuated by jealousy and envy if he blackballs the unworthy one at a club and refuses to associate with him. If a man commits a terrible crime nobody expects other men to be filled with maudlin sentiment about him.

No matter what another woman is, no other woman can ever criticize her without being called a cat, and if she has the moral courage and hardihood to hold that sex doesn't justify crime, and that the woman who breaks the law should be punished for it, everybody turns on her the cry that it is woman against woman, and that women have no pity for each other.

Consider the Lovely Campaign Now Being Conducted by 2 Women

All of which makes it a baffling and a perplexing job to be a woman, but amidst its difficulties Providence has vouchsafed us one mercy—it made Taft and Roosevelt our brothers instead of our sisters. Otherwise we should never have heard the last of the dangers of the emotional sex in politics, and the polls would have been the North Pole to which no skirt would have penetrated for a generation to come.

As it is we have hopes, and we point with pride to the fact that the two ladies who are now rivals for the distinguished office of president of the Federation of Women's Clubs are conducting a campaign that is fragrant with rose water, and each is saying that the other is perfectly sweet and a darling, and would make just a lovely president if she was elected.
